'Cover Up' Laid To Garnett's Aid At Crime Inquiry

Kindleberger Admits He Squelched Lawyer's Assault Case.

But Denies Friend's Threat of 'Expose'

$100 Loan to Attorney Is Revealed as Police Make Charges.

Assistant United States District Attorney Karl Kindleberger caused the arrest of Michael Edward Buckley, jr., an attorney, but refused to issue papers against him a few hours later in Police Court when Buckley dared him to do so and threatened him with exposure, police testified before the House District Crime Committee yesterday.

Preceding the police in the witness chair, Mr. Kindleberger had told of a trip to Pittsburgh accompanied by Mr. Buckley. He denied the threats ascribed to Buckley by the police but admitted he had nolle prossed assault charges against Mr. Buckley and had lent him $100 with which "to go to the country and sober up." He displayed the canceled check which he had drawn last June 13. The check, he said, had been cashed by Mr. Buckley's father.

Mr. Kindleberger blamed "some grudge" held against him by Sergt. Raymond B. Carroll, of the grievance committee of the Policemen's Association, for having the episode brought before the crime committee.

Witnesses Placed Under Oath.

The assistant district attorney, who has charge of the Police Court office, and the policemen were placed under oath before they testified. It was the first time the committee placed witnesses under oath.

Private James W. Peters, of the Eighth Precinct; Private Raymond C. Redifer, and Sergt. Carroll were the three police witnesses.

Peters said he had been acting as station clerk in the early morning hours of June 13, 1934, when he received a telephone call from Mr. Kindleberger asking police be sent to arrest some drunken and disorderly men across the street from his house at 3721 Windom place northwest. Private Redifer was sent and brought back Buckley and James McGowan, both of whom were charged with drunkenness, Peters said.

When the taxicab driver who had brought the three to the station complained the arrested men owed him $8, Peters said he went back to the cell to ask Buckley what he wanted to do about the bill.

"He said: 'What did you hit me with the cell keys for?' He had a fever blister on the side of his mouth. Then he hit me in the jaw. I charged him with assault and disorderly conduct in addition to being drunk."

Wrong Name on Record.

John R. Fitzpatrick, committee counsel, displayed Police Court and precinct records. These showed Buckley had been booked and released on bond under the name of Marshall Edward Buckley.

"Where did you get that name?" Peters was asked.

"From the prisoner," the policeman said. Later, it was developed, the $10 collateral posted for McGowan had been forfeited, but the forfeiture had been set aside and the charge nolle prossed. Taking up his story of what happened in Mr. Kindleberger's office at Police Court later in the morning, Private Peters said:

"When Mr. Kindleberger came in I told him I wanted papers for Mr. Buckley for assault. He said, 'I didn't tell you to charge that man with assault.' I said I was sorry, but he hit me. Mr. Buckley came in and he had been drinking. He demanded assault papers against me.

"They quarreled back and forth until finally Buckley said, 'I dare you to give Peters papers against me. If you give him papers against me I'll go right over to the newspapers and spill everything I know about you.'

Declined to Issue Papers.

"Then they went out into a little washroom. In a few minutes they came back and Mr. Kindleberger said he was not going to issue papers. I asked him why. He said, 'I'm running the district attorney's office.' I said I would go to Mr. Garnett's office and to Judge McMahon, who was sitting in that court at the time.

"Mr. Kindleberger said, 'Wait a minute,' and took me a little aside and said, 'Buckley has got a sort of hammer over my head.' He said, 'Buckley talked me into a trip with him to Pittsburgh. If it gets out it will get me in bad with my wife and ruin my home and job.'

"I felt sort of sorry for him and said all right."

"Did you request the charges be dropped?" asked Mr. Fitzpatrick.

Terror Reign In Marines Laid To Gen. Russell

Senator Black Urges Wide Inquiry Into Conduct of Commandant.

By the United Press.

Charges that a one-man board headed by Maj. Gen. John H. Russell has created a "reign of terror" throughout the United States Marine Corps, were made late yesterday by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama.

Black arose to explain his opposition to confirmation of Russell as commandant of the corps and disclosed that he had urged the Naval Affairs Committee to investigate complaints against the Marine officer.

"Many Marine officers have told me that a one-man board dominated by Maj. Gen. Russell was operated solely for the benefit of his friends," Black declared.

"I have been told that a reign of terror exists throughout the corps. Officers are afraid to testify about the situation unless they are brought before a congressional committee when they will tell their story."

Confirmations Delayed.

His opposition, Black revealed, was behind the delay in confirmation of other Marine promotions pending a thorough investigation of Russell's activities.

The situation was brought to the floor of the Senate when Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), Oregon, sought to speed action on Russell's confirmation.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson said last night he was not familiar with Black's charges and indicated that no action would be taken on the confirmation until it is recommended by Chairman Park Trammell, of the Naval Affairs Committee.

Russell was promoted to the permanent grade of major general in August, 1934. In February of last year his name was sent to the Senate to be confirmed as commandant of the corps, succeeding Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller.

Gen. Russell is best known for his efforts in the field of economic and governmental reform in Haiti. Serving in the island republic between 1922 and 1930, he instituted

Bell to Face Second Trial In Poisoning

Churchman Found Sane by Doctors at Hospital in Virginia.

Prosecutor Bryan Urges Early Hearing of Case in Fredericksburg.

By Wilbur Jennings.
A Special Correspondent.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 25.—Edward C. Bell, whose trial here early in December on charges of poisoning and attempting to poison his invalid wife, Mrs. Madge Bell, resulted in a deadlocked jury and his subsequent transferral by Judge Coleman to the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., for observation, is now declared sane in a report, received today by Judge Coleman from the hospital, which is signed by four State alienists.

Bell is expected to be brought back to Fredericksburg within the next week to stand a second trial under the indictment of 12 counts charging six separate offenses of poisoning and attempting to poison his wife.

The next term of corporation court opens on Thursday, March 7, and it is probable that Judge Coleman will then set a date for the second trial of the case which gained national attention.

Bryan Seeks Early Trial.

Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan, of Alexandria, who prosecuted the case, said today that he was prepared to proceed with a new trial at once and hoped the court would set an early date. He was here this afternoon with reference to the case.

Counsel for Mr. Bell have made no statement pending a study of the hospital report and consultation on steps to be taken in behalf of their client. Mr. Bell is represented by W. W. Butzner, W. Marshall King, A. W. Embrey and C. O'Conor Goolrick.

It is believed that defense attorneys will apply to the court for bond upon Mr. Bell's return to Fredericksburg. With the question of insanity now apparently eliminated by the findings of four State authorities on mental diseases, it is possible that the court will grant Mr. Bell his freedom on bond pending a second trial.

Four Sign Report.

The report received today by Judge Coleman was signed by Dr. George A. Wright, superintendent, Southwestern State Hospital; Dr. J. S. De Jarnette, superintendent, Western State Hospital, Staunton; Dr. J. W. Freed, assistant superintendent, Western State Hospital, Staunton, and Dr. A. D. Hutton, assistant superintendent, Southwestern State Hospital. The report read:

"We have made separate, also joint, careful physical, neurological and other special investigations in addition to a carefully worked out mental investigation and it is the unanimous opinion of this medical commission that the said Edward C. Bell is now sane."

It is noted that the report says that Mr. Bell is "now sane." No reference is made to his mental condition at the time of the alleged offenses with which he is charged.

Possible Defense.

Whether on retrial the defense will contend that while Mr. Bell is sane now he might have been of unsound mind at the time of the alleged offenses could not be established today. Prosecuting Attorney Bryan said he was prepared to contest such a point if put forward by the defense and that he has additional evidence to present at the second trial if it were needed.

In a letter to Clerk J. M. Adams transmitting the formal report, it is stated, "findings at the present time do not indicate that he is suffering from any thyroid disturbance. He does, however, have at this time a case of chronic nephritis (Brights disease).

"Taking his case as a whole he is in poor physical health and his health is obviously declining."

At the Bell trial here in December, Dr. Beverly R. Tucker, Richmond, testifying for the de-

'Gee, I'm Broke' Claims Walker, Sued in London

Copyright by the United Press.

London, Feb. 25.—James J. Walker, erstwhile Mayor of New York, walked into chancery court today, admitted he could not pay his bills, and said he and his wife were living with his mother-in-law until he could recoup his fortunes.

The dapper politician said his only income now was $105 a week paid him by a newspaper for a column in London, and that 40 per cent of this was being paid to a collaborator on a book.

Walker frankly admitted that his wife, the pretty Betty Compton, former Broadway actress, had paid all expenses on a recent pleasure and health trip to Spain and that for months he had been living with his mother-in-law at Dorking, near London, chiefly because he had to conserve his dwindling resources.

Reversed the Custom.

"I went there as a guest for one week," he said after the court appearance, "and have been there ever since, thus reversing the custom by which the mother-in-law, invited by her son-in-law to stay a week, stays years."

Walker was summoned to court on two debts, one for 489 pounds ($2,445) for goods supplied by an American firm, and another for 1,000 pounds ($5,000) previously incurred at the Mayfair Hotel in New York. Walker pleaded he was unable to offer a settlement.

Walker said the one ray of sunshine in his predicament was that it gave him positive proof against charges he had been a "political money grabber" while Mayor of New York.

Has Been "Broke" for Years.

He chuckled at what he considers automatic refutation of the insinuations he was a political racketeer in those happy days around Gotham, and appeared pleased despite the "obvious humiliation" of the chancery court hearing on his debts.

"Where is all this money I was supposed to have made in politics?" he asked. "I'll gladly split it with anybody who finds it, because we need it badly now."

"How does it feel to be broke?" he was asked.

"Why, hell," he replied, "I am broke and have been for two years. Otherwise, I would not hesitate to pay my bills (those incurred on be-

Activity in Building Industry Continues at Low Level.

Although activity in the building industry continued at a low level, the spurt shown by industrial production in December increased further in January and in at least part of February, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday in its monthly summary of general business.

According to the board's seasonally adjusted index, industrial production last month reached 90 per cent of the 1923-25 average, the largest volume of industrial production for the month of January since 1930. The adjusted industrial production index for December was 86.

Wholesale commodity prices also advanced during January and the first half of this month, the index figure reaching 79.4 per cent of the 1926 average for the week ended February 16. The upward movement reflected in large part increased prices for cattle, beef and hogs. Cotton, grains and silk showed declines in January but moved upward in the middle of this month.

January Production High.

The industrial production figure for January was the largest since the end of 1930, except for June, July and August of 1933, known as the Roosevelt speculative period when, in order to escape the effect of NRA codes and possible inflation, industry spurted sharply forward.

The industrial production index figure of 90 for last month compares with 83 for January, 1931; 72 for January, 1932; 65 for January, 1933, and 78 for January, 1934.

According to the Reserve Board report, activity in the steel and automobile industries continued to increase rapidly during January and the early part of February, although about the middle of this month steel production declined. Output of lumber also increased in January, but was still at a low level. Cotton and woolen textile mills showed increased activity last month, but meat packing declined compared with December.

"Factory employment and pay rolls increased somewhat between the middle of December and the middle of January, although a decline is usual at this season," the report stated. "At automobile factories the volume of employment increased further by a large amount and there were substantial increases at steel mills, foundries and woolen mills."

Gold Stocks at New Peak.

Construction activities, however, remained the dark spot in the bright picture of January's business situation. Construction contracts awarded in January were slightly larger than in December "but considerably smaller than a year ago when the volume of public projects was exceptionally large," the Reserve Board explained.

During the five weeks which ended February 20, member bank balances with the Reserve banks increased by $260,000,000, bringing their excess reserves to $2,300,000,000. The principal factors in the increase were an inflow of gold from abroad and disbursements by the Treasury of funds previously held as cash or on deposit with the Federal Reserve banks.

Meanwhile the gold stocks of the Treasury have reached a new peak, comprising 243,413,000 ounces valued at $8,519,455,005 at the new price of $35 an ounce. The Government's gold hoard in the last few days surpassed the 242,622,157 held in 1931 and then worth on the basis of $20.67 an ounce $5,015,000,000. The United States Treasury holds about 40 per cent of all the gold in the world.

Senate Argues Works; Idle Put at 10,830,000; Social Plan Imperiled

Not Able to Proceed To Passage of Bills

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Adding to the Administration's anxieties at this time is the fear that the present log-jam in Congress has placed in jeopardy the effectiveness of President Roosevelt's social security program, it was revealed yesterday.

Almost one-half of the State Legislatures now in session are limited to sessions of 60 days or less and most of these will adjourn in another week or 10 days. Meanwhile these Legislatures have been unable to proceed to the passage of State social security bills because of the uncertainty of what the Federal legislation may require. The State acts must conform to the requirements of the Federal act.

Prospect of Inactivity.

Thus unless Congress within the next two weeks passes the President's social security bill—and this is held to be improbable—the possibility exists that at least 20 Legislatures will adjourn without adopting statutes under which their States can cooperate with the Federal Government.

In many cases, State Legislatures will not meet again for two years. Unless such bodies are called into special session the President's program faces the prospect of remaining ineffective in a large part of the country for that period.

The failure of Congress to act on the works-relief bill and the legislation continuing the NRA for another two years, likewise has jeopardized efforts to get supplementary legislation from the States. The form in which these two bills are finally adopted also remains uncertain and the State Legislatures have shown a reluctance to act until they know the Federal requirements.

Only Two States Supporting.

Some weeks ago the PWA drafted for virtually all of the 44 State Legislatures then in session bills under which these States could take advantage of loans from the pending $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill. So far the PWA has received word that only two States, Alabama and Wyoming, have adopted the measures. The Wyoming Legislature already has adjourned.

State directors of the Federal Emergency Council have been asked to report on the status of the PWA bills in their respective Legislatures. Since many of these bills are general in character, bringing State law into harmony with PWA requirements already laid down, it is expected that most States will act on such proposals before adjourning.

But the outlook for State action on the social-security program, especially unemployment insurance, is not bright, it is conceded in Administration circles.

To Impose Pay Roll Tax.

According to the President's Committee on Economic Security none of the State Legislatures have acted beyond the naming of commissions to study the matter. Twelve States have had special commissions at work for some time and are said to be in a position to adopt State laws as soon as Congress acts. A number of other States named their commissions recently.

The President's committee believes that the States should act at once in forming their unemployment insurance plans because their administrative agencies should have

Grace Opposes Taxes to Curb Profits of War

Says Arms Firms Deserve Earnings; His 12-Million Bonuses Revealed.

By the Associated Press.

Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Co., bluntly told the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday that he is opposed to the plan to tax away all profits of munitions manufacturers in time of war.

His stand was taken a few minutes before the committee produced testimony that he had received combined bonuses from the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation totaling $12,282,000 in 18 years. The questioning of Grace was preparatory to inquiry today into naval building contracts held by the latter company.

The Missourian then asked Grace: "Do you see why a skilled mechanic should be drafted and capital left to operate at a profit? What is the difference between capital and man power?"

There's a Difference."

"There is a difference," Grace replied, and added:

"I think we should be fairly compensated for use of private invested capital."

The interchange occurred during questioning as to whether he approved a universal draft of men and industry in time of war, with a 100 per cent tax on industrial profits.

"I can't conceive of the Government taking over an institution in industry and telling the men at the head to go on and run it," Grace asserted. "That is not government."

Rocking back in a swivel chair before the committee, he declared war time did not justify a change in the relative pay received by individuals in industry and in the Army. To compel an industrial executive to take an Army officer's pay for operating a shipbuilding

New Deal Estimate of Jobless Well Under A. F. of L. Figure.

Lone Debate Stirs Calm of Capital

Leaders Try to 'Deceive' Public as to Cost, Hastings Says.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Capitol waited anxiously at the listening post yesterday for the voice of the people to make itself heard on the President's battered work relief bill, but reception was bad and the voice wasn't heard.

Administration leaders, depending upon the country to rise up in unison and demand that the Senate pass the measure in the form urged by the President, continued their vigil, while the bill itself rested uneasily in the Senate Appropriations Committee, which has scheduled no meeting.

Backed up behind it was the Administration's entire legislative program.

Estimate of Idle.

The acute nature of the unemployment situation, meanwhile, was made known in the New Deal's first official estimate of jobless—placed at 10,830,000, as of December, 1934. Part of a report on NRA operations, the figure was out of line with the 11,329,000 estimate by the American Federation of Labor for the same month.

From another Administration agency came complaints of funds shortage, directly attributable to works bill delay. At the Public Works Administration it was said that $150,000,000 available for housing and slum clearance had been sharply reduced by allocation of $95,000,000 to continue the present relief set-up. Except where contracts actually are signed, all projects are being held up, it was learned.

Twenty-one Democrats and as many Republicans, whose insistence on the prevailing wage amendment sidetracked the bill to committee again, gave no indication of changing the vote that brought on the stalemate. An informal poll showed none was ready to change his ballot.

Calm Over Capitol.

Only one stormy debate in the Senate, that came as anticlimax to the sudden reversal of Administration leadership on the works bill last week, ruffled the lethargic calm that seemed to have settled down on the Capitol.

Senators still were waiting for the deluge of telegrams and letters predicted from "back home" when constituents discover relief may be wrecked on the prevailing wage shoal. But if yesterday's response was any index, that reaction is sharply divided. Senators reported mail "no heavier than usual." As a general thing, commendations of the prevailing wage vote were as numerous as protests against the bill's wreckage.

A charge that leaders are deliberately attempting to "deceive the public" with claims that the wage amendment is more costly than the President's proposal, inviting a flood of propaganda against the amendment, was made in the Senate by Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware.

Robinson's Statement.

It brought Senate Majority Leader Robinson to his feet at once with reaffirmations of Administration claims that the program can never be carried out so long as the McCarran amendment is part of the bill.

Harassed on both sides of the aisle by Republican and Democratic prevailing-wage advocates, Robinson was hard put to it to hold his ground, and humorously admitted his trouble when Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, ironically offered "assistance."

"Lord knows I need assistance," Robinson laughed.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, demanded the measure be brought back at once to the Senate floor and an agree-

Spring Skips Into District, While Most of Nation Shivers

While a large portion of the United States shivered yesterday in the gip of winter, Washington enjoyed a touch of spring that brought temperatures to a peak for the year. The day's high, 68, was 30 degrees above the 36-degree low record 12 hours before at 3 a. m.

Damage throughout the country was heavy and stocks and crops suffered from devastating dust storms and tornadoes, followed by a blizzard. The wheat belt profited from the moisture of sleet, snow and rain—the first precipitation in some arid sections since the end of last summer's drought. A tragedy was reported from Hammond, La., late yesterday when a searching party stated by telephone it had located the bodies of four men missing since they set out in a small outboard motorboat Sunday for a fishing trip on Lake Ponchartrain. High winds capsized their boat. The men were Gus Warner, Tim Fagan, Randolph Slocum and Tom Potter.

Rain and a drop in temperature were scheduled here today, the Weather Bureau said last night. The mercury will nosedive tonight, with rain to come, it was asserted.

The Associated Press said there were no available estimates of the widespread damage by storms.

A woman died at Picher, Okla., from injuries received in a tornado. Another Oklahoman was found dead of exposure. A Milwaukee woman collapsed and died battling snow drifts.

At Des Moines, a man fell dead shoveling snow. When her motor car struck a sand drift, a young girl died in Colorado. In Nevada a child, 11, was killed by a falling icicle.

The benevolent sun in Washington, however, caused forsythia on the White House grounds to show color. On the lawn snowdrops bloomed.

'We Quarreled, Prayed, Slept,' Say Lost Twins, When Found

John and Margaret Miller, 8, Safe at Home After Night in Swamps; 'We Got a Lot of Scratches,' Says Brother; No Other Hurts Suffered.

Weary after an adventuresome night in a Maryland morass, John and Margaret Miller, 8-year-old twins, lost in Berwyn, Md., swamplands Sunday, were safely at home last night, sleeping soundly.

The children, who disappeared near Sunnyside, Md., Sunday at 3:30 p. m., were found yesterday at 6:30 a. m.—just 14 hours later—in a wooded section less than 50 yards off the Baltimore-Washington boulevard.

Covered with warm blankets and sheets, luxuries they didn't enjoy early yesterday morning when they fell asleep under an oak tree, from sheer exhaustion, John acted as spokesman, and said:

"After we left Daddy's car we played around in the woods about half an hour. Then we tried to find a way to get across the stream (Indian Branch). Finally we got across, but we couldn't get back. We walked along a way and then we didn't know where we were.

"Margaret wanted to go one way, but I knew Daddy's car was the other way. We got cross at each other. I told Margaret she could go the way she wanted to. She did, and I went the other way. After a while we met again and I had to give in. We went Margaret's way.

"Finally we got across the stream on a log. There were a lot of weeds and underbrush. We got a lot of scratches. Margaret fell in a pond of water up to her waist, but she got out all right."

Here Margaret said that it didn't take the late afternoon sun long to dry her clothes, but one foot was almost frozen, she said. They both said they were not cold until night came on. John continued:

"We found a path and it wasn't long before we came to the railroad tracks." These were the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, about two miles below Sunnyside, Md., where the car had been parked by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Miller, who had brought George 11; Samuel 13, and the twins for an outing.

"We walked along the railroad tracks until we came to a road we

Pathos in Sisters' Death Leap Revealed by Notes at Inquest

By the Associated Press.

Romford, England, Feb. 25.—In a gloomy little coroner's court, its windows streaked with rain, British justice drew the last bit of pain and pathos today from the suicide of Elizabeth and Jane Du Bois, who leaped down a "pretty straight corridor" from an airplane to join two men in death.

While the grief-stricken father of the girls, Coert Du Bois, United States Consul General at Naples, waited with their mother in an adjoining room, a jury brought in a verdict of death "while of unsound mind"—the usual verdict in such cases.

The parents had hoped that the last intimate thoughts of their daughters would be kept from public knowledge, but against a consular protest Coroner C. E. Lewis revealed those thoughts, written jointly in separate letters to their father and mother, before a jury of eight villagers and half a hundred newspapermen.

That the beautiful Jane Du Bois, broken-hearted at the death of Flying Officer John A. C. Forbes in an airplane crash at Messina, Sicily, had accompanied her sister, Elizabeth, to death from a Paris-bound air liner there was no longer any doubt, after Lewis read the letters. Elizabeth was equally heart-broken over the death of Flight Lieut. Henry L. Beatty in the same crash.

"There will never be anyone else for me," Jane wrote. "Charles and I were going to spend our lives together and I must keep my part of the bargain."

The letter to Du Bois, beginning "Darling Coert," said:

"Do you remember Charles telling about the corridors? The one before us seems pretty straight. Charles was engaged to another girl

Rayburn Wins Tilt Over Scope Of Committee

Reversal of Rules Vote Strips Marine Group of Radio Bills.

Dynamic Representative Sam Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, yesterday won a House quarrel over jurisdiction of communications legislation.

The Rules Committee, in secret session, upheld Rayburn and reversed its earlier position by voting to return control of radio, telephone and telegraph bills to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. The vote was a defeat for the Merchant Marine Committee.

A threat of the Rayburn group to seek to retaliate by stripping the Merchant Marine Committee of its authority over shipping matters on the theory that they involved interstate commerce figured in the squabble.

There have been more angry words at this session over the jurisdiction of committees than over any other single issue. The scrap reached its zenith a fortnight ago when the Rules Committee adopted a rule, rescinded yesterday, which would have changed the name of the Merchant Marine Committee to include the word communications and would have seriously impaired the authority of the commerce group.

Originally, the argument of the merchant marine members was that in the past they had handled measures involving use of the radio at sea and that they had the first claim on all communication bills.

The revised rule gives the Merchant Marine Committee jurisdiction over shipping matters "including all transportation by water, Coast Guard, life-saving service, lighthouses, lightships ocean derelicts. Coast and Geodetic Survey, Panama Canal and fisheries."

The action of the Rules Committee sidetracked a potential floor fight and served to minimize other differences over control of legislation. The Rivers and Harbors Committee, however, still is dissatisfied over alleged encroachment on its preserve by the Flood Control, Agriculture and Military Affairs Committee.

Another committee tiff probably will be aired on the floor again when the House reaches consideration of the Wagner-Lewis economic security program. It was handled by the Ways and Means Committee instead of the Labor Committee, ostensibly because it contains tax features.

Chairman Connery, Labor Committee, has charged his group was discriminated against and permitted a subcommittee to conduct "rump" hearings on old-age and unemployment insurance legislation.

Reverse Filibuster on Works; Labor in Its Teacups; Those Myriad Petitions.

By Raymond Clapper

PERHAPS no one has missed it but the dead calm which has fallen over Washington is a reminder that the old-fashioned rip-roaring filibuster is dead. The Norris lame duck amendment killed it.

About this time in any odd-numbered year heretofore, Congress would have been tense with excitement. Night sessions would be drawing crowded galleries from the movie houses. Senatorial debate would liven up and there was always the hope, seldom a vain one, that some Senator would appear after dinner in his cups, if not his hiccoughs. There were always frantic appeals by legislators who wanted legislation through punctuating the slow, impudent drawl of obstructionists who were talking for time, holding the floor with rhetorical wind until the final gavel, at noon on March 4, should mark the end of the Congress.

Many a time when the hands of the clock over the Vice President's chair pointed to 12 noon on March 4 a Senator would be cut short in the middle of a filibustering sentence by the gavel of sine die adjournment, thus scuttling any number of bills.

Once after such a performance, the late Vice President Marshall ended the session by declaring the Senate adjourned "sine dei"—without God instead of without day.

In 1908, a filibuster against the Aldrich-Vreeland currency bill ran for 28 days. The elder La Follette spoke continuously for 18 hours and 23 minutes. This particular filibuster was broken when Senator Gore, the blind Senator, after doing his stint in the filibuster, sat down unable to see that the late Bill Stone, of Missouri, who was to take his place, had slipped out to the cloak room for a moment. Opponents of the filibuster got the floor and the majority was able to proceed. The late Theodore Burton, of Ohio once stood for hours in house slippers. Senators talked until they dropped.

That is all done for now. For the first time the Norris lame duck amendment is in operation. Instead of expiring on March 4, in odd years, a Congress may now continue to sit until January 3 of the following year. That changes completely the legislative strategy. The powerful leverage of that March 4 deadline has been removed.

* * * *

As a result we are now witnessing the first filibuster in reverse.

Friends of the works bill are stalling for time. Formerly opponents of the bill would have put on a filibuster against it, to kill it by preventing a vote before the March 4 adjournment. No such strategy being possible now, opponents of the bill sought to load it down with an amendment objectionable to the Administration. They succeeded. The Administration sent the bill back to committee to let it simmer.

Meantime, they are beginning a series of senatorial speeches explaining the issue in the hope that in time the public will become aroused on their side of the issue and club the obstructionists into line.

At the same time Administration officials are doing what they can to stir up sentiment. Secretary Ickes has put out a list of $8,500,000,000 potential works projects which will be buried unless the works bill passes. Some are urging Mr. Roosevelt to go on the air with an appeal to the country. Administration leaders are filibustering in the Senate until the yeast works.

Beetle-browed labor leaders struggled with teacups yesterday. They wandered around new offices tinted in old rose, pale green and soft grays. Everything was elegant. Even the filing cabinets had been painted to match the soft tinted draperies. Heavy heels which have run the errands of the toilers sank silently into the deep-cushioned rugs.

Few rich capitalists in these days would have dared to provoke the wrath of labor by such a display of conspicuous wealth. But the labor leaders were not displeased. They were proud. These handsome premises upon which they gazed were part of the new palace of the Labor Department, dedicated yesterday in a gala housewarming with music, cut flowers, cut glass—and so some of the labor critics of the New Deal insist—cut wages.

Senators and Representatives are patient and conscientious about receiving and filing the bales of petitions which come to them on every conceivable subject. The mere listing of them fills pages of the Congressional Record every day. They want a holiday on Gen. Pulaski's birthday, self-government in Puerto Rico, a dozen varieties of old-age pensions, want something done to the Mexican government and to improve the harbor at Michigan City, Ind., and they pray that Congress will encourage the use of grain alcohol for automobile fuel.

The Constitution gives every citizen the right of petition to Congress and most of the citizens apparently exercise it. There is nothing, therefore, that the Senators and Representatives can do about it except to tote the bundles of petitions to the hoppers of the two Houses day after day.

Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, however, thought matters were being carried too far when he opened one letter and found 12 blank petitions with request that he send 25 cents by return mail, obtain signatures to the petitions and then mail them to his Congressman.

Mr. Leon Dure, The Washington Post's White House correspondent, reports from Hyde Park that the old roan mare, "Rocking Chair," took President Roosevelt for his first sleigh ride since he entered the White House. Of course not counting, as was pointed out at the Capitol yesterday, the one on which the Senate took him last week on the works bill.

Permit to Reorganize Sought By Baldwin Locomotive Works

Firm to Pass $313,158 Interest Payment Due on March 1.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 25.—The Baldwin Locomotive Works, one of the oldest and largest builders of locomotives in the United States, today filed a petition in Federal District Court seeking reorganization under section 77(b) of the Federal act providing for reorganization of corporations.

With this action came the announcement that the corporation could not pay $313,158 in interest due March 1 on $10,438,600 of five-year 6 per cent consolidated mortgage bonds in the hands of the public.

Judge Oliver B. Dickinson signed an order allowing the corporation to retain possession of its property until March 22. He then will hold a hearing to determine whether to allow the concern to continue permanent possession or whether he will appoint court trustees to take over the business.

William Clark Mason of counsel for the corporation said that none of the subsidiaries is affected by the petition. The assets of the Baldwin Works, Mason said, are $59,089,945 and the liabilities $22,141,381 as of January 31, 1935.

George H. Houston, president, said he "may have a statement later as to what effect it may have" on employes of the locomotive works.

"The board of directors * * * reached the conclusion that it is essential to the present and future welfare of the Baldwin Locomotive Works that its capital structure be reorganized, and that plans for this purpose be presented to all security holders through the medium of the reorganization act," Baldwin said.

The announcement of the move stated payment of the March 1 interest to consolidated mortgage bondholders "could not" be made "without endangering the ability of the company to continue current operations." Bonds outstanding represent the balance of a $12,000,000 issue.

Blackhawk 'Likeness' Exposed as Impostor

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—So that gigantic fellow who has been masquerading as Chief Blackhawk atop a bluff overlooking the Rock River these many years is an impostor!

A critic asserted that the noble features of the famous statue by Lorado Taft were "so entirely opposite from the personal appearance of Blackhawk that it should not be allowed to pass as even approximately true."

And Taft, in answer, wrote J. E. Bulger, chairman of a Chicago motor club committee on highway beautification, that he had begun the figure as "just an Indian bidding farewell to his native region."

Panama Renews Demand for Gold

Again Refuses Currency U. S. for Canal Zone Rent.

By the Associated Press.

Panama last night renewed its demands for payment in gold of a $250,000 debt due from the United States today, and advised the State Department any currency other than the precious metal would be returned promptly.

If gold is not forthcoming—and apparently it won't be—it will bring to $500,000 the amount due Panama, inasmuch as that government last year refused to take currency for the annual rental on the Panama Canal Zone, and asked vainly for the yellow metal instead.

A complicating factor is that Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, the Panamanian minister, already has pointed out to the United States that refusal to pay this debt has financially embarrassed his government. Unless the matter is arranged before May, he has indicated, Panama will be forced to default on part of the service due on bonds worth $16,000,000. Most of the securities are held by Americans.

President Bars Losses on Mail For Sea Lines

No Contract Canceling Unless Carriers Are 'Reimbursed.'

By the Associated Press.

A decision against any attempt at flat cancellation of ocean mail contracts without compensation was said authoritatively last night to have been agreed upon within the Administration.

In an informed quarter it was said the decision probably would be reflected in the President's forthcoming message to Congress on the Merchant Marine and ship subsidies.

This word was quietly passed as experts representing more than a score of groups interested in transportation gathered for a major conference, opening today, at which an effort will be made to reconcile views on pending regulatory legislation. The exploding of some fireworks appeared not improbable.

Meanwhile, Joseph B. Eastman, transportation coordinator, appeared yesterday before a Senate committee on the controversial proposals for reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission and extension of its authority over all forms of transportation. He suggested elimination of "destructive competition," in the field of transportation, a proposal carrying implications certain to be opposed.

Carriers "Uneasy."

In the matter of ocean mail contracts, some authorities, recalling what happened in the air-mail contracts, admitted the ocean carriers have been uneasy since the Administration began an investigation of their agreements and the circumstances under which they were drawn.

The air-mail contracts were scrapped on the ground they were the result of fraud and collusion. Several Senators assailed ocean mail contracts.

But the action aroused a furore that has not died away completely and it was said that the White House was opposed to anything similar in the expected transfer of ocean mail contracts to a flat subsidy basis.

Along with the recommendation for this change, officials said, Mr. Roosevelt's message to Congress this week also might urge that carriers be reimbursed for any loss growing out of the transfer.

Eastman yesterday emphasized that "destructive competition" in the field of transportation should be eliminated so far as is possible.

The coordinator, who helped draft the proposals contained in the measure for reorganization of the ICC, denied before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that proposed regulation of interstate truck commerce would raise freight rates generally.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, contended the change would increase levies. Eastman said in his opinion the result would be to prevent uneconomic competition, since he felt the truck rates in most instances were already as high as rail rates.

"We should do one of two things," Eastman said, "either give the railroads the same opportunity to compete that other carriers have, or extend regulation to all forms of transportation on equal terms."

Not "Ready" for Ownership.

He added his recommendations were based on the assumption that public sentiment favored continued private operation of the common carriers and that it was "not yet up to the point of assuming the direct obligation of public ownership."

The score of groups interested in transportation will meet today at the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to go over the recommendations drawn up by the transportation conference of 1933-34. These recommendations will be considered in the light of Eastman proposals.

Among the proposals previously adopted were several for extension of regulation to all interstate carriers and actual administration of such regulation by boards named by State commissions.

Predictions were made before the conference assembled that a subcommittee would be set up to study the Eastman proposal and report back to a future meeting of a conference.

Afterwards a definite stand on the coordinator's recommendations would be drawn up and submitted to the various organizations participating in the parley for action before a vote by the conference itself.

Groups Meeting.

Agencies composing the conference are the American Bankers Association, American Iron and Steel Institute, American Short Line Railroad Association, American Transit Association, Association of Railway Executives, Association of Regulated Lake Lines, Canal Carriers Association, Grain and Feed Dealers National Association, Institute of American Meat Packers, National Association of Manufacturers, National Industrial Conference Board, National Highway Freight Association, Railway Business Association, Security Owners Association, National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, American Petroleum Institute, American Railway Association, Domestic Freight Forwarding Association, Lake Carriers Association, Maritime Association of the Port of New York, Mississippi Valley Barge Line Co., National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, National Lumber Manufacturers Association and Public Relations Committee of the Eastern Railways.

Bank Robber Suspects Identified by Cashier

Atlanta, Feb. 25 (AP).—Leland Harvey and Aubrey Smith, long-term convicts who were pardoned last year by Gov. Eugene Talmadge, today were bound over to a Federal grand jury under bond of $50,000 on charges of robbing messengers of the National City Bank, Rome, Ga., of a $9,785 pay roll.

J. A. Palmer, cashier, identified Harvey and Smith as the men who had held him up on August 24, 1934. Smith and Harvey were taken into custody recently in Richmond, Va.

U. S. and Reich Trade Relations Near Collapse

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 25.—Trade relations between the United States and Germany have taken a turn toward complete collapse, it was revealed today in official figures just made available.

Within one year American sales to Germany have dropped from $15,700,000 in January, 1934, to $2,600,000 last December, or to approximately one-sixth of their volume within a 12-month.

Similarly, German sales to the United States show a steady, although less marked decline, dropping from almost $6,500,000 in January, 1934, to about $5,500,000 in December.

While during the years from 1926 to 1928 the United States sold on the average goods for more than $473,500,000 to Germany, sales for 1934 totaled only $107,000,000, or less than one-fourth of the amount. German exports to the United States dropped from a high of $236,000,000 in 1929 to a low of $69,000,000 during 1934.

Heavy United States Losses.

Unless barriers on both sides are removed soon, American business investments in Germany, amounting to millions of dollars, may prove a total losss or at least may become so "frozen" that American parent concerns might for all practical purposes consider them nonexistent.

Such profits as American plants operating in Germany still make are in reichsmarks which can be used only in Germany. A stockholder living in America can neither draw his interest nor withdraw his capital from Germany.

The more desperate Germany's need for foreign exchange is becoming, the more American trade suffers. To understand why this is so it must be remembered that the one central object of the economic policy of Hjalmar Schacht, economic dictator, is not to deplete Germany's meager reserves of foreign exchange with which to purchase raw materials, and without which Germany can not exist. On the contrary, the aim is to increase them.

Reverts to Barter.

This dearth of foreign exchange has compelled Schacht to revert to barter. Of all the countries trading with Germany, the United States probably fares worst under this policy. In the first place Schacht will authorize no barter arrangement of American goods against German if the German commodity is one that America would buy anyway.

For instance, a California orange concern offered to trade oranges and lemons for potash. Schacht insisted, however, that America needs potash anyway, and so let her buy it with dollars.

Only occasionally, if Germany needs an American commodity desperately is the straight barter arrangement approved.

Ku Klux Klan Urges Dry Vote In Alabama Poll

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 25.—A campaign salvo from the long dormant Ku Klux Klan was fired today preparatory to Alabama's first referendum on State prohibition in 26 years, placing in the hands of the voters tomorrow the decision on what course the legislature shall take two months hence.

Just how large will be the vote in the three-fold referendum was a question. Little interest had been displayed. A cold wave bringing rain and snow was expected to hold down the vote.

The referendum was promised by Gov. Bibb Graves in his campaign last summer, but he has refrained from taking active part on either side, declaring himself "the referee" in a "free and untrammeled election."

Voters will cast ballots on three questions:

1. Whether the State's prohibition laws shall be modified.
2. Whether the sale, manufacture and distribution of beer and wine shall be legalized.
3. Whether the sale of whisky and hard liquors shall be legalized "under strict State control," but without saloons.

The result of the voting will have no effect on existing laws, as the legislature, before taking a 10 weeks recess, did not enact enabling legislation.

Returning April 30, the legislature will confront this task based on the results of the referendum tomorrow.

The klan pronouncement, carried in Birmingham on hand bills, set forth that "the Ku Klux Klan is opposed to any change in the present prohibition laws of Alabama."

Bank Loses Claim On U. S. Payment

Casualty Company's Right to Contract Fund Upheld.

Holding that the rights of the Guardian Casualty Co. as a surety on an unfinished Government job in the Anacostia River were paramount to those of the now defunct North Capitol Savings Bank, which had loaned the contractor money, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday ordered that money due to the contractor from the Government should go to the surety.

The bank, now in the hands of a receiver, sued to enforce collection of a $3,800 promissory note, the proceeds of which admittedly had gone into materials and labor on the job. When the Government stopped the work because of a breach of contract, it owed the contractor, the Maryland Montgomery Co., which is now in the hands of a receiver, $4,068.05.

Because the surety company had been compelled to expend much more than the $4,068.05 in meeting the contractor's obligations, the court held that its prior lien on the amount due was sufficient to overcome the claims of the bank. Thus, the Guaridan Co. will be allowed the complete amount due and the bank will receive nothing.

Soviet Influence In Mexico Denied

N.Y. Consul Scores Charges Made in Philadelphia.

The Mexican Embassy yesterday made public a statement of the consul general in New York denying charges made at a Catholic mass meeting Sunday in Philadelphia that "paid Russian agents are encouraging Mexico toward atheism and communism."

Speakers at the Philadelphia meeting were reported in the press to have charged "communistic agents and the Soviet government are responsible for the present trend of Mexican politics affecting the Catholic Church."

The official statement said:

"Mexico has had no diplomatic or official relations with Russia since 1929. No agent from the Soviet government has come to Mexico since that date and furthermore Mexican immigration laws expressly bar the admission of Communists into the country."

It was charged at the mass meeting that the Russian government had spent $18,000,000 in its Mexican propaganda, but the official statement said these charges "are too absurd to be even commented upon."

Crime Probers Go Into Huddle Over Testimony

Police Charge Kindleberger 'Covered Up'

Garnett Assistant Admits Squelching Attorney's Assault Case.

"Mr. Buckley signed a statement saying I had not struck him in the station house. Then Mr. Kindleberger wrote out a check for $100 for him."

"Were any papers issued charging Mr. Buckley with assault, with drunkenness or disorderly conduct?"

"No papers were issued at all."

"Paid Doctor's Bill."

"Sure if the case was reopend," Peters said, and told of subsequently presenting a doctor's bill for $18 to Mr. Buckley who paid it. He had been treated by a private physician for a cut mouth because he did not want to have police surgeons make a report of the cut, he said. Mr. Werner asked why and the policeman said "more for his benefit" than any other reason, adding he had no personal feeling or motive and had been summoned before the committee.

"Let me understand you," interposed Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, committee chairman. "Do you mean to say the Buckley case was nolle prossed while he was in court under the influence of liquor?"

"Yes, sir."

Private Redifer told the same story about the arrest of Buckley and McGowan, adding that Buckley "was very disorderly" in the station house and "struck James Peters in the mouth" there.

"Buckley said Mr. Kindleberger would not dare prosecute him, because he had too much on him," Redifer said. This was in the station. Later in the morning at Police Court, the policeman said, Buckley had three men with him and said one was a newspaper reporter and again said "he had too much on Mr. Kindleberger."

Testifies to Threat.

"Mr. Kindleberger said he was going to send him to jail. Mr. Buckley said something about exposing a trip to Pittsburgh. They went back in a little room and later Mr. Welliver (assistant corporation counsel, having jurisdiction in drunk and disorderly cases), told me to mark 'no papers' in the case."

Questioned by committee members and counsel Mr. Redifer told of his arrest of two boys for stealing automobile radiator caps and charging them with petty larceny. Their father, he said, had said he wanted to forfeit the $10 collateral posted for them.

"Mr. Kindleberger said he wanted the cases kept out of Police Court," he continued. "When I told him the boys' father wanted to forfeit, he said 'I'm running this office and the Police Department hasn't anything to do with it.'"

The charges were nolle prossed, he said. Two nights later the boys were laughing about it in a neighborhood drug store, he testified.

Friction between Mr. Kindleberger and members of the police was described in testimony by Sergt. Carroll. He said he saw Mr. Buckley in Police Court last Saturday.

"He was smiling and I said, 'Eddie, I'm awful sorry this has got to come out, but it has just got to the point where we have got to protect ourselves against this fellow,'" Sergt Carroll said, adding that by "this fellow" he meant Mr. Kindleberger. Mr. Buckley had referred to the $100 check given him by Mr. Kindleberger, and added, "He was awful foolish to give me that before those two fellows," Sergt. Carroll said.

Tells of Trip.

"Is there cooperation between the district attorney's office and the police?" asked Representative Randolph.

"With every one except Mr. Kindleberger," Sergt. Carroll said.

Mr. Kindleberger had told the committee about the trip to Pittsburgh in detail, including the fact the party had eaten ham and eggs for breakfast. Those making the trip included Paul McCallum Hallam, a friend with whom Mr. Kindleberger had served in France during the war, when he had been gassed while driving an ambulance, himself and Mr. Buckley. Mr. Buckley had got drunk, brought male friends to their hotel room and toward evening women were brought in, Mr. Kindleberger testified. During the evening one of the women had been slapped by Mr. Buckley, Mr. Hallam had knocked Mr. Buckley down and the women had fled fearing trouble, Mr. Kindleberger said. He and another friend of Mr. Buckley's remained and had finally quited him down and got him to bed, he said.

There was an argument when Mr. Buckley was in his office in Police Court the morning he was arrested by Peters, Mr. Kindleberger said.

"Mr. Buckley," he added, "was in such condition he should not have been in court."

"You mean he was still drunk?"

Describes Loan.

"Yes. I asked him if I let him go would he go down in the country and sober up. Officer Peters said 'I'm willing to do that if he'll sign a statement I didn't hit him.' Mr. Buckley signed the statement in my office. I issued the nolle. Mr. Buckley said he hadn't any more money. I said I would loan him some. His father said 'no, don't give him any money. I'll take him home.' Later I found his father had taken my check and paid arrears owed by his son at the building association."

"Did Officer Peters ask you to drop the case?"

"Yes, sir."

Later when he had been told by Peters that Buckley had said something about women on the Pittsburgh trip Mr. Kindleberger said he retorted: "What of it? He brought them in."

When he assumed office 13 months ago Mr. Kindleberger said he had "found a deplorable condition" regarding bondsmen and other matters and he had initiated the police court investigation now being made by the Department of Justice. There first had been four, then eight, later 12, and now there were 16 investigators at work, he said. Mr. Fitzpatrick asked if one of the court judges had not initiated the investigation. Mr. Kindleberger said no, although Judge John P. McMahon "had been making a little private investigation of his own."

Asked whether he engaged in private practice of law Mr. Kindleberger said there were a few matters which had not been cleaned up since he assumed office, adding, "I don't take on any new cases." He had, however, taken on some administrative matters and filed perhaps 40 cases in municipal court since he assumed office, he said, in response to further questioning. Others also have private practice, he said. His salary was $3,800 less the 5 per cent cut, he said. The hearing is to be resumed at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Salaries Are Increased.

New York, Feb. 25 (U.P.).—The staff of the bureau of the budget, which has been busy pruning salaries in other city departments, today received an increase. Budget Director Rufus E. McGaghen said the bureau had dropped seven key men and that the added burden to others of the staff warranted the raise.

plant, he said, would "disjoint the whole system."

Opposes Profits Tax.

"Greatest efficiency comes from having the individual interested in the results of the work he performs," Grace declared.

"Did the corporation or the Government get additional service from you because of that bonus during the war that it would not have received otherwise?" Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, asked.

"Certainly not," Grace replied. "I never gave it a thought."

From the records the committee disclosed that Grace had received $3,669,000 in bonus during the three war years beginning with 1917 when he was head both of the steel corporation and of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, and more than $8,613,000 since, in addition to salary.

"Would you be opposed to a 100 per cent tax on profits?" Nye asked.

"I would. The company couldn't operate."

"Can you see the difference between that and drafting a man for $1.25 a day to go out against bullets and gas?" Clark asked.

Against U. S. Ownership.

"I wonder if it wouldn't be right," Grace countered, "to pay the soldier more, $5 a day, or even more."

"Have you ever protested that this was not done?" Nye snapped.

"No," Grace replied calmly, "I am not a student of war."

He declared Government ownership would not be efficient.

"But suppose an officer walked into your plant and told you you were drafted," Clark asked, "and he told you the trains were still running out to Leavenworth (penitentiary), what would you do?"

"I would do the very best I could," Grace replied.

The records disclosed that Grace received a salary of $12,000 a year from 1917 to 1930. In 1930 his bonus was reduced but his salary was increased to $101,000 a year. From 1932 to 1934 no bonus was paid but his salary was increased to $180,000 a year.

Corporation earnings in the 18-year period were disclosed to have been about $40,000,000.

Just Talk, Officials Say Of Grace Kidnap Plot

By the Associated Press.

Bethlehem, Pa., Feb. 25.—The "kidnap plot" against Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, was deflated today into "just talk."

"Nothing more than a conversation between two men" was the way the "plot" was described by an official high in investigation of the reported abduction scheme.

A proposal to "snatch" the steel magnate and hold him for $250,000 ransom was made in an underworld conversation "six or eight months ago," but no "plot" was hatched, the spokesman said, and no threats were sent to Grace or the two public officials—Mayor Robert Pfeifle and Nicholas Costelucci, county court clerk—reported named to share the kidnap fate.

The only evidence of the conversation itself came, he said, from a statement alleged to have been made over the week-end by Louis Katura, of Hellertown, one of four men under arrest on charges of robbing several banks.

At the Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice in Philadelphia it was learned the Federal men abandoned the "kidnap" angle of the case after checking the story attributed to Katura.

In Washington, where he testified before the Senate Munitions Committee, Grace laughed at stories of the "plot." Mayor Pfeifle and Costlucci were equally unconcerned.

half of his former wife in New York), even though I consider I am not legally or morally responsible for them, inasmuch as when I was making $25,000 a year (as mayor), I paid my former wife $15,000. That is surely enough to cover the necessities of life which a husband is legally and morally bound to provide.

"It is strange that they never asked my consent for my former wife to contract all these bills—although they knew we were living apart. Furthermore, they never even sent me the bills and never asked me to pay them while I was in New York."

Wisecracks About Suit.

Walker was in good spirits, however, and even wisecracked in old-time style about the court proceedings.

"I'm sure they gave me a dry-cleaning process," he said, "resulting in the discovery that I am broke and own nothing. Obviously, they thought our trip to Spain, which they described as a cruise, was a regular junket, whereas I went there on account of my wife's health.

Walker said he "wasn't squawking," but that he felt "obviously something is wrong somewhere. The fantastic bills which I read about in the New York papers included items like $10 for a cake of soap, $150 for bathing suits and $45 for a pair of slippers.

"One thing is certain—the lousy publicity they have given me as a result of the court proceedings will not do me any good nor them either—because, after all, the only chance they have of being paid is my future capacity to earn, which they seriously imperil—thus cutting off their nose to spite their face."

Walker said he hoped to return to New York "some time after the summer."

Ex-Wife 'Can't Believe' 'Jim' Now Blames Her

By the United Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 25.—Mrs. Janet Allen Walker, divorced wife of James J. Walker, "can not believe" that the former New York Mayor has blamed her for his financial condition.

In her home here where hang half a dozen pictures of the former mayor, Mrs. Walker said tonight she "never has, and never will" do "anything" to jeopardize his business or political position.

"You see," she said, "he is still just Jim to me—not a man I want to hurt."

She was awarded a divorce here three years ago.

Mrs. Walker expressed a belief that her estranged husband had been misquoted in dispatches from London in which he blamed her for his financial condition.

"I can not believe he said it," she repeated.

Mrs. Walker lives near the seashore here. Each room of her home has a picture of Walker, one of them a life-size painting, on the wall or mantlepiece.

He gave his opinion that Mr. Bell was insane at the time of the alleged poisoning attempts and still was mentally unbalanced with no prospect of recovery.

Dr. Henry W. Mrs. Bell, wife of the accused, is said to be in better health at the present time than she has experienced for some months.

Stock Millions Given Children, Says Mellon Aid

Financier's Account With Broker on Margin in 1932, Records Show.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 25.—Gifts of bank and capital stock worth Millions of dollars by Andrew W. Mellon to his son, Paul Mellon, and his daughter, Mrs. Ailsa Bruce, were disclosed today at the hearing by the board of tax appeals into the financier-industrialist's 1931 income tax return.

The information was given by Howard M. Johnson, Mellon's financial secretary, on the witness stand for the fourth day in support of his employer's contention that the Government received $139,000 too much in income taxes from Mellon in 1931, as against the Revenue Bureau's claim that he still owes $3,089,000.

Other Highlights.

Other highlights developed from John's all-day cross-examination by Government Counsel Robert H. Jackson were:

1. Introduction of records showing that Mellon, while Secretary of the Treasury, held a brokerage marginal account which as of January, 1932, carried a balance of $601,500 to cover stock purchases of $2,000,000.

2. The statement that the former Treasury head held a total of $9,368,000 in tax-free municipal and Federal Farm Loan bonds which were not reported in his 1931 income tax return.

3. Testimony that Mellon himself personally dictated the policies of his financial interests.

Mellon Is Present.

While Johnson unfolded the story of many more transactions from stacks of books and records the banker listened from the same seat he has occupied in the hearing room since the inquiry began a week ago. At times he appeared bored with the mass of technical detail and testimony.

Johnson, who incidentally disclosed Mellon pays him a salary of $15,400 a year, told the details of the gift by which the two Mellon children came into $8,368,000 on March 23, 1931. It consisted of 2,000 shares of stock of the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh.

He read from a letter Mellon had written to his son and daughter at the time he gave them the stock, just before he went to London as ambassador to the Court of St. James.

The letter read in part:

"As I told you on former occasions, my father imposed responsibility upon his children as fast as he thought they were prepared to assume it, and I have endeavored to follow this policy with you.

"Pleased With Judgment."

"I am pleased with the judgment which you are showing and I feel justified in giving you the further responsibilities at home and upon my return I shall have more freedom to give attention to some philanthropic matters in which I am particularly interested."

Other gifts Johnson mentioned included: 100,000 shares of capital stock of the Gulf Oil Corporation of Pennsylvania to Paul Mellon 45,000 shares of Standard Steel Car Co. each to Paul and to Mrs. Bruce, and 83,000 shares of the Carborundum Co., also to each.

Turning to stock market affairs, he brought out from Johnson that the marginal account had been handled by him (Johnson) since 1921—the year Mellon became a member of President Harding's Cabinet.

Question of Attorney.

"Who gave directions to the brokers?" asked the attorney.

"I did," said Johnson.

"You conferred with Mr. Mellon in connection with the account?"

"I furnished him with any information."

"You received any instructions?"

"Yes, whenever he wanted to make any changes."

On the question of Mellon's tax-free bond holdings, Jackson pointed out to Johnson a section in the income tax return calling for the listing of such assets in the return. Johnson told him:

"Those items were not taxable and are not returned (reported)."

The Government attorney questioned Johnson with the apparent object of showing that Mellon himself was responsible for the conduct of his financial affairs, even while he was in Washington with the Treasury Department.

Johnson testified that the Mellon policies were dictated entirely of the financier's own accord.

He always was actually in charge, with the qualification that while he was in Washington, he did not have the same close touch," said Johnson.

thought was the one we had come down with Daddy. We walked down this a long way until we came to the big highway."

Actually the children had found the Branchville road, three miles below their starting point, and had walked to the Baltimore boulevard at Berwyn, Md.

"We walked up the big highway (toward Baltimore). We thought we were going toward Washington. We wanted to find a policeman. We thought maybe we might walk home. It got dark and we went in a woods and lay down. It wasn't comfortable there, so we got up and walked some more.

Prayers First.

"After a while we came to a log tourist camp. The sign said it cost 75 cents. We didn't have any money so we went around in the woods the other side of it and lay down on pine needles.

"We used Margaret's coat for a sheet and mine for a blanket. We knelt down and said our prayers first. Margaret said her prayers twice. Then we tried to go to sleep. It was so cold it took us a long time to get comfortable. This was late.

"It was daylight when we woke up. We got up and started out again. We were cold and hungry. We hadn't been walking long before we came to a policeman."

Prince Georges County Policeman Claude Reese, who was patroling the road looking for the children, said they declared they "were looking for a policeman" when he drew up beside them. This was near the White House Tavern, historical landmark several miles south of Beltsville. The children had walked approximately seven miles.

Officer Reese rushed the children to the parents, who were with a group of searchers near Sunnyside. The parents, overcome with joy and fatigue, could hardly talk. Mrs. Miller wept slightly.

Carried home, the children were bathed, wrapped in warm blankets, and put to bed. Briar scratches were dressed.

The news that the children were found spread rapidly and the firemen from Branchville, in charge of Chief G. C. Johnson who headed the search; Berwyn, Berwyn Heights and College Park, were disbanded.

Four Women Gassed In Cleveland Outbreak

Alienation Suit for $100,000 By Thomas May Be Delayed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Feb. 25. — Some doubt prevailed here tonight whether the $100,000 alienation of affection suit which Richard B. Thomas, New York architect, has field against Dr. Henry J. Langston, of this city, will be tried at the present term of the Federal court which opened this morning.

District Attorney Joseph G. Chitwood said that the criminal docket is unusually heavy and that two of the cases would probably run as long as two days each, also that Judge John Paul is due in Roanoke next Monday.

Howard Rogers, counsel for Dr. Langston, was perturbed over this development. He said: "We confidently expected a trial at this term. Dr. Langston is eager to have the case disposed of and we have a number of out-of-State witnesses here brought at considerable expense."

Rogers hoped the case would start Thursday or Friday.

The alienation suit has gripped Danville and an unusually large attendance is expected. Mrs. Virginia Carrington Thomas, handsome wife of the New York architect, came here last summer to accompany the Danville Choral Society in the presentation of a memorial concert for Mrs. Langston, wife of the physician who had been active in the choral organization.

Dr. Langston has entered a sweeping denial of the accusations filed against him in the bill of complaint and says that he was no more than courteous and polite to Mrs. Thomas on the occasion of her visit.

Gasoline Concern Sued For $10,000 by Woman

Alleging she was forcibly detained by an attendant in a Standard Oil Gasoline Station at Eighteenth and L streets northwest, when she sought to drive out of the station without paying for repairs to a battery, Mrs. Nancy P. Marsh, widow of Arthur Marsh, chaplain of the First Division, A. E. F., yesterday filed suit asking for $10,000 damages.

Mrs. Marsh said she purchased a guaranteed battery two monts before the incident. She said she went back to have some repairs made on it and, thinking the guarantee covered the work, started to drive out. She was forcibly detained and injured, she alleges. Mrs. Marsh resides at 1810 Belmont road northwest.

The minister, the Rev. Earl Campbell, was buried here after services in the Holiness Church, of which he was pastor.

Ralph Hood, Beckham County attorney, has asked that the boy be sent to the State Hospital for the Insane for observation before facing a hearing. Hood delayed filing murder charges, because of the absence of County Judge J. R. Cornelison.

Whale-King Unafraid As 13 Ships Join Hunt

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Feb. 25.—Whale oil prices 100 per cent better than last year made harpooners jubilant instead of superstitious today as they outfitted 13 vessels for a cruise in the dangerous Bering Sea.

"We bagged 814 whales last year," said William Schupp, whale-king of the Northwest, "and this year prices are twice as high. We are not a bit superstitious when we send 13 craft north, for we are going to make some money.

"Don't forget, though, that we have been losing. It has cost my two companies $150,000 in the last four years, and we shall only be making up for lost time. The price of whale oil is variable, considered in relation to the price of cottonseed oil, cocoanut oil, fish oils and tallow. Right now it is 7 cents a pound bid. Last year it was 4½—so you see we have a right to be optimistic."

Dumping of Dead Cattle At Capital Threatened

St. Paul, Feb. 25 (AP).—State Senator C. I. Oliver, Graceville, said today Beardsley farmers, aroused by lack of live stock relief, have threatened to dump carcasses of horses and cattle that have died of starvation on the State Capitol grounds unless action is taken to aid farmers in drought areas. Beardsley is in western Minnesota where last summer's drought was most severe.

Senator Oliver said farmers had told him hundreds of head of stock are dying daily.

Simon Reveals Peace Mission To Berlin Is Set

Also May Visit Moscow on Behalf of Franco-British Pacification Project.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 25.—The announcement of Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, in the House of Commons today confirming reports he is going to Berlin and considering going to Moscow on behalf of the Franco-British pacification project, overshadowed the relatively less important talks he began with the visiting Austrian statesmen.

Although it was officially stated no invitation had been received from Poland, it was understood that a visit to Warsaw was likely. A stop-off there would be on the direct route to the Russian capital.

It was understood that Sir John made clear to the Austrians, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg and Foreign Minister Egon Bergerwaldenegg, that Britain would not be able to go further in defense of Austrian independence than the undertakings made in 1934 to consult Italy and France in the event independence is threatened.

Britain has no intention of signing the series of accords launched by Italy and France for protection of Austria and the establishment of noninterference in central Europe, it was authoritatively stated.

How far England is ready to go in defense of Austria was expected to be the major point of discussion in Sir John's trip to eastern Europe. German officials already have objected that the Rome accords tend to leave France and Italy the sole arbiters of Austria's future, while Russian officials here expressed the fear that Britain's "pacifistic attitude" toward Austria will fail to prevent eventual domination of Austria by Germany.

Sir John said no date has been set for his visit to Berlin. His announcement was the answer to a formal invitation from Berlin to discuss all points raised in the Anglo-French communique of February 3.

Germany's original reply to the Anglo-French communique left doubt about whether she was willing to talk about anything except the air agreement, the rest of the projects, which Russia and other countries have insisted must be discussed simultaneously, being scarcely mentioned in the reply.

Nazis See Triumph In Statesman's Visit

Berlin, Feb. 25 (AP).—A big triumph for the Nazis was seen today by the propaganda ministry in the decision of Sir John Simon to come to Berlin and talk with Reichsfuehrer Hitler about the Anglo-French accord.

He will be the first top-ranking statesman of either England or France to consent to come here since the Nazis came to power, and will be the first to face the Nazi dictator.

U. S. Lays Kidnaping Of Bremer to Three

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Feb. 25.—Assigning roles in kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, the Government will charge the actual abduction of the St. Paul banker to Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell and a third hoodlum, it was learned today. Campbell and Karpis recently shot their way out of an Atlantic City hotel.

The Government also will charge that Fred C. Goetz, university-trained bandit found dead in Chicago a month after Bremer's abduction, helped the late Fred Barker in "advance work" for the $200,000 abduction.

Nazi Break-up Stirs Suspicions Of Viennese

Fear Voiced Hitlerites Seek Control of Fatherland Front.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 25.—Reports from official sources that wide sections of the Austrian Nazi front were voluntarily dissolving evoked many expressions of alarm today in the government camp.

An official announcement said voluntary dissolution of all Nazi organizations—both military and political—in upper Austria was in progress.

The government's communique said upper Austrian Nazi leaders and subordinate leaders were accepting a suggestion of the provincial director of public security and renouncing all illegal activity. It said they had submitted themselves voluntarily to the police.

The pro-government Telegraf printed an alleged secret order issued from Berlin instructing all Austrian Nazis who have become well known to the police as such to withdraw from active leadership and make room for others better qualified to carry on undercover activities against the government. The instructions emphasized that the withdrawal must be as unostentatious as possible.

Any Nazis voluntarily submitting themselves to police would be eligible for amnesty and theoretically might enter the Fatherland Front—the government organization which alone has legal rights of political expression and activity in Austria.

The new Nazi move left not only neutral observers but many government supporters frankly puzzled or suspicious. Col. Walter Adam, federal commissioner for propaganda and secretary of the General Fatherland Front, pointed out that although "reformed" Nazis theoretically can join the front they must be tested individually for their sincerity.

There was an uneasy feeling in strongly anti-Nazi quarters that the move was merely a new piece of strategy, and that the Hitlerites will enter the Fatherland Front with the idea of capturing it from within.

Long Goes Home About Phone Rates

Huey Will Also Call 1-Day Legislature Session.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 25.—Senator Huey P. Long, arriving today for the announced purpose of continuing hearing on his plan to force lower telephone rates, announced tonight that a special one-day session of the Louisiana Legislature would be called to conform his oil tax rebate agreement with the Standard Oil Co.

Under heavy guard on a swift trip from Washington, the Senator sidetracked the telephone hearing for a time after his arrival to confer with Gov. O. K. Allen on the legislative plans.

The special session will be called "within a week or ten days," Senator Long said. There will be no new laws passed and no laws which set up his "dictatorship" in the four sessions of the Louisiana Legislature held last year will be repealed.

Mission Couple Prey of Bandits Near Ninkiang

Capture in China Adds to Fears for U. S. Women Lost in Area.

By the Associated Press.

Sian, Shensi Province, China, Feb. 25.—The capture and possible murder of a young Australian missionary at Winkiang and the disappearance of his wife contributed today to fears for the safety of two American women missing since February 18.

Unconfirmed rumors reached the China inland mission here that the Rev. S. C. Frenchan had been killed by his bandit captors. Communications with Ninkiang were cut off and no confirmation could be obtained.

The two Americans, Miss Ruby Verne Thompson, of Nevada, Iowa, and Miss Alma Ruth Arbitey, of Chicago, were reported to have left Fenghsien a week ago.

(The two women are graduates of the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. Miss Arbitey sailed for China in September, 1932, while Miss Thompson has been there since 1917. The former is 27 years old and the latter, 42. Relatives in Chicago and Iowa told of receiving letters from them written more than a month ago. Miss Thompson told of having been advised to leave their post, presumably because of bandit activities.)

News of the Frenchan couple sharply recalled the fate of the American missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Stam, who were beheaded by Communist rebels in southwest Kweichow province last December.

Information available at the inland mission was that the Frenchans, who had been married less than a year, were captured together about two weeks ago at Ninkiang. Mrs. Frenchan was released and told to procure ransom.

Local missionaries have undertaken a search through the snow-covered mountains of western and southern Shensi for Mrs. Frenchan, who was said to be pregnant. It was feared she had become lost while attempting to reach Fengsiang, a 10-day journey northward on foot.

Two British men missionaries, one of whom arrived here only Saturday, spent 12 days fleeing through the territory. They started out on foot again today, laden with food and medicines, to try to find Mrs. Frenchan and her husband.

Ford Is Invited By U. S. to Bid

By the Associated Press.

As a definite step toward ending the one-time feud between Henry Ford and the NRA, the War Department yesterday sent the Detroit manufacturer an invitation to bid on 4,910 trucks and cars to cost around $4,000,000.

Because he had declined to sign the NRA automobile code, Ford for many months was not invited to bid on Government purchases, or his bids were thrown out. He was definitely invited along with the code signers, yesterday, however, to submit figures on the present batch of cars to be used by the Civilian Conservation Corps.

In an authoritative quarter it was said that before March 23, when the bids are to be opened, Army officials expect the NRA to have revised existing code compliance requirements so as to make a Ford bid acceptable.

400 Cars Sold.

Ford recently sold 400 cars to the Department of Commerce and smaller lots to other Governmental departments, but complications attended other attempted sales.

NRA officials now are working on revised compliance requirements. These, understood to have tentative approval of President Roosevelt, would permit future bids by Ford, Sears Roebuck and several other large firms now listed as NRA "holdouts."

NRA now demands that all bidders on Government purchases sign affidavits guaranteeing their compliance with existing NRA regulations and provisions, and that they will continue to comply in the future.

Ford's agents have been unable to sign such compliance promises because of his refusal to sign NRA codes.

Invitations for Bids.

The War Department in issuing invitations for bids of the CCC vehicles was said to have eliminated all reference to future compliance. The requirement is that the successful bidder be able to comply with NRA regulations as they exist when the bids are opened.

Under present plans, the proposed compliance compromise will become effective before March 23.

Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, has made several attempts to achieve a compromise in the Ford-NRA controversy because of his desire to widen the field in War Department competitive bidding.

Halifax School Closed After Measles Outbreak

South Boston, Va., Feb. 25 (AP).—With 116 of the 320 pupils absent because of measles, the high school at Halifax closed today for at least two weeks. This is the third outbreak of the malady to occur here.

Bethel, a small school, near Halifax, reported only 19 present out of an enrollment of 60. It is feared other closings may follow.

Two Former Bankers Paroled.

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 25 (AP).—State prison authorities today announced paroles have been granted to Bernard Marcus, 44, and Saul Singer, 43, former officials of the Bank of United States, convicted of misapplying funds in 1931, after the bank failed.

Social Security Bill Is Facing Lengthy Delay

Half of Legislatures Will Adjourn Within Ten Days.

a number of months to get ready for the institution of the system, which under the pending bill would become effective next January 1. The pending bill imposes a pay roll tax of 3 per cent on employers of four or more persons, effective next year. This tax allows a credit up to 90 per cent for contributions paid into State unemployment funds if the State has agreed to the Federal plan and conforms to its requirements.

The situation as it respects the old-age pension section of the security bill is not regarded so seriously. Twenty-eight States now have old-age pension laws and 45 have mother pension laws, although in many cases these statutes need revision to conform to the Federal plan.

The social security bill is now pending before the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee. The latter body is holding the measure, pending action by the House. The Ways and Means Committee has completed hearings on the measure and is now engaged in making changes in it. It is hoped to get it to the floor of the House next week. But it is unlikely that the Senate will act on it for at least two weeks, and perhaps much longer.

The Ways and Means Committee yesterday made a substantial change in the contributory annuity section of the bill. Originally the measure provided for a tax on pay rolls and salaries, beginning in 1937 at 1 per cent—of which the employer would pay half and the worker the remainder—and increasing to 5 per cent in 20 years.

Sufficient Funds Not Seen.

The committee held that this tax in the early years would not produce sufficient funds to meet the demands of the system and voted to make the initial tax 2 per cent and to increase it by 1 per cent each three years until in the thirteenth year the tax would be 6 per cent.

The Treasury estimates that this tax would result in a fund of $50,093,000,000 by 1980, which would be invested in Government obligations—if the debt is that large by 1980—and would be used to pay old-age annuities to persons passed 65 years of age.

Farmers, domestics and casuals were exempted by the committee from the contributory old-age annuity taxes. Such nonprofit institutions as hospitals, churches and schools and colleges also were exempted. Another amendment adopted would make the proposed social insurance board which will administer the old-age pensions and annuities and the unemployment insurance, an independent agency. Originally it would have been under the Labor Department.

Miss Perkins Denounces 'Hare-Brained' Schemes

"Impossible, harebrained schemes for providing for the aged" were denounced by Secretary Perkins last night in a radio address. She expressed confidence in the Administration's old-age pension plan.

The Secretary agreed that the proposed measure does not provide complete solution of the program, but said it was a "sound beginning."

Calling the $4,880,000,000 works-relief proposal "employment assurance," she said:

"In these two measures, employment assurance and unemployment compensation, we have a first and second line of defense which together should form a better safeguard than either standing alone."

Jailbreaker Loses Leg.

Wave of Protest Fails to Arrive To Help Works

"To say we are not going to have a bill because somebody can't have his way, is simply childish," Wheeler said. "We've come to a fine pass when we say we can't legislate unless we legislate according to someone's dictates or according to the views of some White House spokesman."

Black Sees Passage.

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, author of the 30-hour-week bill, now causing leaders concern, expressed confidence the works bill "can and will be passed" and denied the prevailing wage amendment "would cost the Government an additional dollar."

"We shouldn't cling stubbornly to one idea, giving it magnified importance," Black said.

Meantime, the Appropriations Committee has announced no plans to proceed with the bill, and its chairman has not explained its failure to act. Asked if he could account for the delay, Robinson said he could not, but added:

"I'm sure it's nothing sinister."

Protest March Threatened.

While Senate Democrats who voted for the McCarran amendment uniformly declared they had not been swamped with protests from "home," and saw no reason to change their vote, Paul V. Betters, director of the United States Conference of Mayors, threatened a work-relief march on the Capitol, if the work-relief bill is killed.

"If it becomes necessary," he added, "there will be a mobilization here in Washington of forces of those who believe in work rather than the dole that will make the bonus army look like a Boy Scout parade in comparison."

Betters Plan Denounced.

Mayors in a number of important cities declined to back Betters in his warning.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, denounced the plan as "fantastic," according to United Press, while Mayor Angelo Rossi of San Francisco, said he "would take no responsibility" for the statement, although he felt Congress should act.

From Milwaukee, the Associated Press reported Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, a Socialist, and head of the United States Conference of Mayors, as declining to comment on the threatened march. Hoan said he had wired Betters to seek a compromise on the prevailing wage proposal.

Socialist and Communist leaders in New York assailed the Betters proposal. The Communist-controlled National Unemployed Council wired Hoan, demanding he repudiate the Betters statement, while the National Communist Party made the same demand on Mayor LaGuardia of New York.

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, said he doubted very much any large number of unemployed would demonstrate, "except against cessation of relief." He said he was certain the unemployed would not demonstrate against the prevailing wage amendment.

Byrns Backs President.

To the support of the President came Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, who denied that the House would support the Senate's prevailing wage stand. He insisted the House will stand by the $4,880,000,000 bill, in the form it was hastened through that chamber.

Reports that the Senate Appropriations Committee will meet soon and report out a direct relief bill continued current in the Senate. If Administration leaders were active against the wage amendment, the strong American Federation of Labor lobby was just as active for it. President William Green said there would be "no compromise."

Charge of Hastings.

Precipitating the Senate's stormy debate, Senator Hastings charged the real purpose of recommitting the bill "was to give the public an opportunity to impress their views upon the Senate in the hope that those who voted for the amendment would change their minds."

Robinson brushed aside the Hastings argument, and declared support for the McCarran amendment was based on "an unfounded fear" that the President's plan would break down the wage structure. The President has no such intention, he added, and thundered:

"The only solution of this problem is to make private employment more attractive than public employment. As long as you keep inviting laborers on the Federal pay roll, you needn't talk to me about ending either the dole or work relief."

Couzens Hits Plan.

Pitching into the controversy, Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan charged Robinson was "confusing" the country with "the idea that to pay prevailing wages you must appropriate billions more."

"I deny it, and the Senator can't prove it," Couzens said. "The statement is incorrect, inaccurate and deceptive."

While reaction against the prevailing wage vote was awaited from the country, Senator McCarran, author of the plan, said he had not received one protest. Typical of most, was Couzens, who said he had received two indorsements and two criticisms of his action. Senator Alva B. Adams, Colorado Democrat, who voted for the amendment, said only 10 per cent of his mail was critical. Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, said he has received 35 to 40 protests, but they would not affect his vote. Many Senators said they had received no letters or telegrams either way.

Roosevelt Told Public Favors His Wage Plan

President, at Hyde Park, Withholds Attack on Senators by Radio.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 25.—President Roosevelt received encouraging reports from Washington today on the progress of his tense, backstage battle with the Senate on the "prevailing wage" feature of the $4,880,000,000 works bill.

Word was telephoned here from the White House that thousands of letters and telegrams are pouring into the Capital supporting his stand and criticizing the votes of Democratic Senators who favored the McCarran amendment.

The accuracy of this statement was not subject to investigation, but it was intimated by those close to the President, at any event, that he is confident of public support in the outcome. For himself, the President said nothing, preferring to await the full force of reaction.

Seen as Referendum.

While outwardly only resting and pursuing the routine chores of his high office, the President in reality was seen to be the main actor in a drama of the greatest consequences.

The Administration's decision to recommit the works bill after the 44-43 defeat on the wages amendment, and then await the effect of pressure from the country before bringing it up again, is viewed here as tantamount to calling a national referendum.

The issue that split the Democrats in the upper House is whether to pay employes on work relief the prevailing wages (in most cases, the union wages) of their communities, or whether a definite lower scale should not be adopted to encourage workers to find private employment.

In voting for the former, the Senate broke with the President on one of the most important sections of the works bill, since he is convinced that the principle of lower wages for relief work is essential to his whole program. Thus, in effect, the issue in the public mind is that of the Senate versus the President.

Awaits Public Reaction.

While the feeling has been expressed that the lack of progress of Congress in the two months of the present session indicates a weakening of the President's hold on the people, this opinion is not held here. On the contrary, there is a tendency to criticize Senators who, elected on the strength of their professed sympathy with the President, are now working against him.

For himself, the President has maintained silence. Nor will he have anything to say in the near future, it was indicated semiofficially, since he first wants to see to what extent popular sentiment will influence the Senate.

As an ace in the hole he can always order a microphone to the White House and, in one of those informal but potent radio talks, cause thousands of letters to pile up on congressional desks. For the present, however, he has no thought of making a radio appeal, it was stated.

Mr. Roosevelt passed the day outwardly oblivious to all this. Away from the excitement of Washington, he worked in the peace of his tiny, cubbyhole office, which is hardly big enough to accommodate more than one person. He worked without interruption, since no caller has succeeded so far in penetrating the guard about him, and managed to clear up much of his correspondence.

Miss Perkins Congratulated.

In addition, he gave consideration to two more messages to Congress, one of them dealing with American shipping, the other outlining his whole transportation policy.

The first message is expected to recommend a frank and open subsidy system for the merchant marine, removing the cloak of subterfuge from the present ocean mail contract system. This message will probably be sent to Capitol Hill Wednesday or Thursday.

The second message will recommend the Federal regulation of all forms of transportation by an expanded Interstate Commerce Commission. The lines for this were drawn in the recent report of Joseph B. Eastman, coordinator of transportation.

Later in the day Mr. Roosevelt broke his routine by going for a short automobile ride. He also wired Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins his congratulations on the dedication of the new Labor Department Building. The program for the rest of his visit home, which will end with his departure Wednesday night, was said to be indefinite.

Deaf, Blind Group Confer With Peery

Governor Holds Parley With Interpreter's Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Feb. 25.—A delegation of Virginians called on Gov. Peery today—and had to have an interpreter in order to talk with him.

The callers were a group of alumni of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind at Staunton. With the aid of a woman interpreter from Washington, who communicated with them in the sign language and transmitted their thoughts to the Governor, they told how they thought the deaf at the institution could be taught best. They recommended a combination of the sign and the lip-reading methods.

Without power to act directly, the Governor referred their petition to the department of education.

Leaders Want A Compromise On 'Pink Slips'

Publicity for Incomes of More Than $100,000 Discussed in House.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Compromise of the income tax publication issue, perhaps by throwing open to inspection only those earnings exceeding $100,000, was discussed yesterday among House leaders.

Advocates of publicity for only extraordinarily large incomes contended their plan would prevent important tax evasions, but would not injure the credit of persons of modest means who have objected to disclosure of how much money they made. There was sentiment for outright repeal of the publicity law in some quarters.

Secretary Morgenthau has been asked by the House Ways and Means Committee for written recommendations on the question. He was reported to favor repeal.

A bill to do away with the pink slips containing total income now required to be submitted with the tax returns next month, introduced by Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, has drawn support from the Sentinels of the Republic, and other groups.

Bell Demands Repeal.

Repeal of the law was demanded of the House yesterday by Representative Bell (Democrat), Missouri, Chairman O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, interrupted to observe someone should "work on" the Senate. He recalled the publication proposal originated in the upper chamber. He conceded there was repeal sentiment in the House.

In a New York speech Bacon characterized the pink slips as "Government writs of assistance to snoopers" and assailed the legislation as an invasion of private rights.

"The provision," the New Yorker charged, "smothers the guaranties of privacy and security. It promotes trespass, even if it is only through the eye. It is abhorrent to our sense of fair play."

"Demagogues" Assailed.

Bacon urged secrecy to prevent crime, to discourage gossiping and to block use of the information by business competitors. He divided proponents of publicity into those who wish to prevent tax-evasion and those who have a political ax to grind.

"There has been honest and dishonest salesmanship of income-tax publicity as a policy," he added. "I can not agree with the reasoning advanced by those honestly adhering to the view of its usefulness in the public interest.

"But more often than not, in my estimation, this agitation for publicity has been boiled in the cooking pots of demagogues whose ulterior motives are not the public interest, but class cleavage and the creation of class hatreds."

Home Rule Act In W. Va. Voted

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 25.—Home rule for municipalities—the right to amend their charters as they see fit—was approved by the Senate today.

It was one of eight measures that sped through the Senate in one of its busiest sessions, while the House argued over dairy regulations and proposed exemptions from taxation.

The home rule measure calls for submission to the voters in 1936 of an amendment to the Constitution to transfer the charter problems from the Legislature to the municipalities.

"I want to congratulate the Senate and express the hope that the House of Delegates will complete this emancipation of the Legislature from hours of consideration and much time spent on local bills," declared President Charles Hodges upon adoption of the home rule proposal by a 26-to-0 vote. Four Senators were present.

It was sent to the House for consideration. There, meanwhile, the Delegates had apparently defeated another proposed constitutional amendment proposing an exemption from taxation of $2,500 worth of property for the head of every family. Announcement of the vote was deferred until tomorrow. The measure was sponsored by Delegate Joe Gentry (Democrat), of Cabell, who offered a similar proposal defeated a week ago.

Both branches changed their opinions on the minimu mage for the purchaser of 5 per cent beer after repeal becomes effective March 1. The Senate whoch voted a week ago for a 21-year limit cut it to 16, the House boosted its 16-year provision to 21. A compromise conference was ordered.

and he was going to break it off and we would have been married this summer probably.".

That was Jane's writing. They filled in each letter in alternate paragraphs.

"We hear of his death in Paris on Monday. We came to London next morning and came to the Ritz. We did not want to see anyone. Comfort mother with all your strength. Luck is with you now.

"BETTY AND JANE."

Prayed for Lost Loves.

The second letter said:

"Mother darling:

"Do not doubt that we are with you now and always and with great love. Please do not think we have done anything wicked, for we were given proof that if there is a rule, an exception has been made for us.

"We went to St. Martin's-in-the-Field (a church in London) because they were to pray for Charles and Dick during the services. You must have known when you heard that the crash in Sicily would pull us over a line which has never been well enough defined for us.

"We spent the day loaded down with half crowns (50-cent pieces) for the proletariat to drink to him. What is left in the bank is all Coert's. If it is considered ours, it goes to the unemployed at Pembroke docks (from where the flying boat Ace of Diamonds hopped off for Singapore) or for Royal Air Force widows. Our bags are at the Victoria Station. Do you think George Peterson (the coroner explained this was probably a book they had written) can be published?

Asks for Understanding.

"Darling, there is no one else on earth we can even hope to have understand. We would like that there be nothing in this letter to hurt. It is only the smaller things, sentimentalities, that do that. Think of us as undivided and happy as we would never have been after our lives became complicated with servants. We loved you and that can never be broken or destroyed. You must not be discouraged if there are difficulties. It will pass. This is the greatest trust which we have ever put in you.

"Forever, Bessie and Jane."

Du Bois appeared near to breaking when called to the witness stand to answer a series of routine questions propounded by Lewis.

Du Bois raised his head to answer sharply only once after the coroner had asked if there were anything "between your daughter and Forbes."

The bodies were cremated. The ashes will be interred probably at Naples.

Beverly Hills Woman Tells Court Effort to Trace Threats to Husband Effected Joint Home for Couples, With Subsequent Mate Mix-Up Suits.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 25.—Mrs. Leah Clampitt Sewell, attractive Beverly Hills matron, testified today that, while the alleged "perfect quadrangle" was taking form last November, one side of it suspected the other side of writing extortion notes.

She said her husband, Barton Sewell, wealthy sportsman, had received threats.

"We suspected everybody," she testified, adding, under questioning, Walter Emerson was one person they suspected.

So, she told the court, the Emersons were invited to live in the Sewell home temporarily, "for company." She said samples of Emerson's hand writing were taken during this time by a representative of the district attorney's office.

Thus, the two families, longstanding friends, came to live under the same roof.

With this beginning, other witnesses had said, came the asserted "love quadrangle."

The "quadrangle," Mrs. Emerson said, at one time reached a point where, during a beach party, the couples paired off with each other, occupying adjoining bedrooms.

Mrs. Emerson, well known in Denver and Beverly Hills social circles, said she had known Mrs. Sewell since they were students at an exclusive girls' school.

The "quadrangle" split suddenly when Emerson, claimant to relationship with Ralph Waldo Emerson, the poet, sued for divorce, naming Sewell as co-respondent.

Mrs. Sewell quickly replied with a suit for $100,000 for alienation of affections.

Barton Sewell replied to Emerson's suit, declaring the romance between himself and Mrs. Emerson was accomplished with Emerson's knowledge and consent. Mrs. Emerson buttressed Sewell's contention.

HolyName Unit In Alexandria Sets Breakfast

Third Annual Event Slated March 10 by St. Mary's Society.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 533.

The third annual Holy Name Communion breakfast will be held in the George Mason Hotel at 8 p. m. Sunday, March 10, following the celebration of mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church at 7 o'clock.

The annual Communion breakfasts were started in 1933, when Anton Lang was the principal speaker, and last year Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, delivered the principal address. It is expected that more than 300 Holy Name men and their friends will attend the breakfast. Invitations have been extended to the Holy Name branches at Manassas, Clifton Station, Clarendon, East Falls Church, Fredericksburg and Mount Ida, which units are in the Alexandria Holy Name area.

The committee in charge of arrangements has begun the distribution of tickets.

Alexandria Chapter, Order of De Molay, held a public meeting last night in the Masonic Temple, when a panel discussion was presented by seven members of the local chapter. This was in preparation for the representative DeMolay examination which will be given to the young men taking part in the panel discussion.

Another feature of the evening was the presentation of several merit badges to members of the chapter. This award was made by the grand chapter of DeMolay as special recognition for 1934.

The Bank Women's Club, of Washington, held a dinner meeting last night in Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, presided over by Miss Alice H. Whitton, assistant to the trust officer of the First National Bank of Alexandria.

A talk on the history of Gadsby's Tavern was delivered by Miss Elizabeth M. Ramey, president of the Alexandria Business and Professional Women's Club, and an inspection and explanations of the antique furniture exhibit in the tavern was under the guidance of Miss Mary Lindsey. Entertainment features were songs by Mrs. Evelyn Howard Sheridan, and colonial dances by the following pupils of Mrs. Mary Cabell Callaway: Mary Lewis, Jennie Lingenfelter, Betty Lee Shuman, Mary Louise Shuman, Mary Anne Heydenreich, Bettie King, Marianna Kyle, Constance Barrett, Marian Kelland and Courtney Lynch. Mrs. Marshall Shuman was the accompanist.

Miss Eleanor H. Watkins and Mrs. Helen V. Reed were in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

Alexandria Council, No. 5, Order Fraternal Americans, was the host last night of Fairfax District No. 4, at their hall, 117 North Pitt street. The district council is composed of councils of Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax counties.

The degrees of the order were conferred by the degree team of Vienna Council, No. 12, C. A. Lane, district deputy State president, presided. Reports were made of the activities of the order during the past term, and a membership banner was presented. A social session was held.

Soup Burns Teacher Aiding School Lunch

Boiling soup, which bubbled from a large can, painfully burned Miss Jean Nichol, principal of the Darnstown, (Md.) School yesterday.

Miss Nichol was taking her turn at preparing the soup to be served to the children. Witnesses said apparently the steam forced the lid from the can.

Physicians who gave Miss Nichol first aid said she was burned about the face and arms.

Old-Age Relief Handling Is Hit By Miss Engle

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 25.—Administration of old-age relief by county commissioners was sharply criticized by Miss Lavinia Engle in urging "trained" handling of this problem today at the State Conference of Social Welfare.

Miss Engle, director of the Board of Welfare of Montgomery County and former member of the House of Delegates, told the 400 persons at the conference that county commissioners are guilty of "political exploitation, political maneuvering and political alchemy" in handling this phase of relief. She spoke during a discussion of old-age pensions.

"We need some appointed board, a professional group trained for social work, to act between the political heads of the counties and the persons who require relief," she said.

Going further into the problem of caring for the indigent aged, she asserted "our almshouses, like most almshouses throughout the country, are a complete disgrace to the communities in which they are maintained. They are especially deficient in the medical and nursing care they provide."

She said sounder administration of relief would result if old-age pensions and other forms of relief were not "set apart and talked about as individual problems."

Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, outlined at the conference a measure soon to be introduced in the Legislature to govern State-wide administration of relief. He said the bill would enlarge the jurisdiction and powers of the State Board of State Aid and Charities, "so that it can truly operate a State department of public welfare."

Miss Anna D. Ward presided over the conference. Other speakers included J. Milton Patterson, chairman of the Allegany County Welfare Board; John B. Gray, jr., chairman of the Calvert County Welfare Board, and Lee L. Dopkin, chairman of Gov. Nice's commission on old-age pensions.

The Governor and Simon E. Sobeloff, chairman of his committee on unemployment insurance and relief, spoke at a dinner meeting tonight.

Relieve Periodic Pain and Discomfort

"Next time" try Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets.
These women tell you how good they are.

MRS. CAROLINE NEWMAN
Rt. #1, Barbourville, West Virginia

The modern woman can't be bothered with cramps and menstrual discomforts. Periodic upsets are not going to interfere with her normal activities if she can help it. And she can.

Next month try Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. They relieve periodic pain and discomfort such as backache and headache. It's silly to suffer when the trial size is only 25 cents. At your drug store.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets for painful periods. I used to suffer severe pains in my back and had to stay in bed most of the day. Your Tablets were recommended by a friend. Since taking them I am greatly relieved of the pains."—Mrs. Caroline Newman.

Was In Bed Two Days

Mrs. Sara Stearns, 676 West Willis Ave., Detroit, Michigan says: "All during the month I felt fine until those terrible pains came. I used to stay in bed two days. Your Tablets stopped the pain and I recommend them highly."

"They Stopped the Pain"

"Every month I was in bed a day or two. These Tablets stopped the pain. I am not bothered any more."—Mrs. Grace L. Botonis, 1761 East 105th Street, Los Angeles, California.

Mrs. Bob Mobley, 3105 Belmont Ave., Tampa, Florida says, "My back used to bother me periodically. Your medicine is wonderful. I have no more trouble."

Refunding Stagnation.

The Administration continues to talk hopefully of the opportunities for large-scale refunding operations which would provide a stimulus to the private capital market and encourage new financing. And experts are agreed that a large amount of refinancing would be done at the present time, if conditions were favorable. Reductions in the rate of interest on long-term issues have made such operations increasingly attractive to corporations wishing to reduce their fixed charges. If these overhead charges were scaled, furthermore, released funds would be available for an expansion of operations. If past experience can be taken as a guide to future development, refunding operations would then lead to an expansion of new financing.

Under the circumstances, it is surprising as well as disappointing that so little progress has been made to date. The strong demand that prevails for gilt-edged securities attests the strength of the existing investment demand and directs attention again to the restrictive effects of the securities act upon the capital market.

Following the recent liberalization of the regulations governing the issuance of new securities, Chairman Kennedy of the SEC expressed a strong hope that the new forms had overcome the chief obstacles to flotations created by the unreasonable requirements of the act itself. However, the law still contains many ambiguities and carries uncertain penalties. Hence, it is doubtful whether the commission can render the securities act harmless merely by helpful administrative rulings. It is possible that the act is still one of the major obstacles to new financing, even though the delays, uncertainties and the costs of preparing a registration statement have been lessened.

Tennessee's Pet Alligator.

The Legislature of Tennessee has made another bow to prejudice while trying to give a backhand signal of assurance that its attitude will have no practical effect. For political reasons the legislators thought it advisable to reject a bill designed to repeal the State's anti-evolution law, but at the same time it was explained that the act is a dead letter and will remain so. The sages of Nashville seem to think they have found a way of eating their cake and having it too.

It appears that the act which forbids the teaching of evolution in Tennessee schools has produced only one result—the much publicized trial of John Scopes. Since then the universities have gone forward with their biological teachings, textbooks have remained unchanged and scientific discoveries have shown no deference whatever to the solemn decrees of the Tennessee Legislature. In other words, the world just keeps on evolving in cool aloofness to the biological wisdom of William Jennings Bryan and those who supported him in the teapot tempest at Dayton nearly a decade ago.

One legislator who voted to retain the anti-evolution law explained that he regards it as he would a pet alligator. Visitors may be shy of this Tennessee product, he said, but it is a harmless sort of thing and—well, why should the Legislature be so heartless as to kill it after several years of innocuous existence. That appears to be the most logical defense of the bill ever offered.

Indications that the people of Tennessee are no longer excited about the law are perhaps the most definite sign of progress in thinking on this highly intricate subject. But reports that legislators consider it politically popular to uphold a measure enacted during a tidal wave of intolerance and bigotry are certainly not complimentary to the electorate of the Hog and Hominy State.

Eden Vs. Niagara.

The Garden of Eden, restored to conditions as livable and fertile as in the days of Adam and Eve, is a project being undertaken by the Irak government and several London engineering firms. It is estimated that $5,600,000 and three years' work will be required to transform this barren tract into an oasis where grains, fruits and even palms will flourish again. The plan is to dam the Tigris River and connect it by a canal to the River Shatt-el-Gharraf, thus affording necessary irrigation.

Any engineering scheme of this magnitude is bound to command respect and admiration. The leashing of a large body of water is always a thrilling achievement and especially so when man attempts to change the course of nature by means of machinery. But in this instance it is the locale rather than the feat which appeals most to the imagination. Not all the efficiency of the modern engineer can entirely rob this construction of its picturesqueness. It is a locale in which too many historic and legendary events have taken place.

To most people the technical factors will pale into oblivion when compared to the suggestion that the Garden of Eden will soon once more bloom with fruits and flowers, not to mention snakes. If the Irak Chamber of Commerce is as enterprising and far-sighted as its engineering department, it should be a simple matter to induce newlyweds to forego Niagara Falls in favor of the place where the first honeymoon on record was spent.

Paraguay Quits The League.

Paraguay's case against the League of Nations is different from that of Japan. When the latter country sent in her notice of withdrawal, which becomes effective next month, she had been found guilty of aggression in Manchuria by a league commission, and had refused to consider the suggestions for settlement of the dispute made by that commission. Japan flagrantly flouted the league, walked out, and nothing was done about it.

In contrast, the league commission sent to the Chaco in 1933 did not "think it expedient to inquire into the responsibility for the war." The origin of the dispute in this indeterminate area is so tangled that the commission was practically forced to sidestep determination of aggression and to concentrate on a cessation of hostilities as preliminary to an arbitral settlement. To this end it recommended the establishment of a neutral zone behind which the two armies should withdraw. This suggestion both Paraguay and Bolivia, a year ago, refused to accept.

Since that time the Bolivian troops have been driven back to the very point to which the league commission suggested they should withdraw voluntarily. So the Bolivian government, not unnaturally, is now much more anxious to secure a negotiated settlement. Paraguay's continued refusal to cease hostilities and arbitrate has, therefore, concentrated league pressure against her, this pressure having reached the point where league members have been requested to lift the munitions embargoes, if any, against Bolivia while applying them to Paraguay. Under this pressure Paraguay sends in her notice of resignation.

Considering the circumstances, it is unlikely that Geneva will attempt to apply any further sanctions against Paraguay. None was applied in the much clearer case of Japan's aggression against Manchuria, and for the great powers to adopt a more active policy in the present case would be too palpably inconsistent. League sanctions, other than a one-sided munitions embargo against Paraguay, could only be anticipated if the United States should give a very strong lead in this direction. And the Department of State so far has preserved absolute neutrality between the two Latin-American belligerents.

The outcome will probably be a virtually undisturbed continuation of the struggle until one or the other country caves in from wounds and exhaustion. In this, certainly, there is nothing for which the League of Nations can take pride. But neither are there any grounds for accusing it of failure. Without any notable assistance from the United States an honest effort to stop the senseless butchery in the Chaco has been made by Geneva. If that effort is futile, the blame can certainly not be laid at the doors of those who at least conscientiously endeavored to secure peace. It is, undoubtedly, a demonstration of the league's powerlessness as a political instrument. But only a distorted mind could conclude that to try vainly to secure peace is more ignoble than not to try at all.

Meanwhile the passage of time is emphasizing much of the league's Chaco report, as written nearly a year ago. It is even more true now than then that: "Behind the lines, while the struggle goes on, both countries are growing poorer, and their future seems darker and darker. The young men are at the front, the universities are closed . . . the Chaco war represents a veritable catastrophe to the advance of civilization in that part of America."

The New Nostalgia.

Three recent theatrical enterprises have been so outstandingly successful in Washington as to invite psychological inquiry concerning the reasons for their phenomenal good fortune. The D'Oyly Carte Company's revival of Gilbert and Sullivan; the screen versions of two stories of such different literary merit as "David Copperfield" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel" alike attract "capacity crowds." Yet the first-named entertainment is anything but a novelty, the second is merely the careful adaptation of an old classic to a new medium, and the third is at bottom only a motion picture of highly romantic type.

It is not enough to say that this trio succeed because of the merits of cast and staging. The long trail of theatrical history is white with the bones of productions excellently cast, magnificently staged, yet doomed by neglect and starvation. For the average theatergoer, the play—the story or its atmosphere—is the thing. In the gladsome light operas which first delighted mid-Victorian England, in the story of Dickens' own youth as attributed to Copperfield, and in the hairbreadth adventures of the Pimpernel there must rest qualities having some peculiar appeal to the audiences of 1935.

In the Pimpernel's case, it is the fascination of escape, of losing one's cares in the contemplation of romantic perils which the spectator imaginatively encounters in his own person and which he vicariously overcomes. But the cases of the operas and of "Copperfield" differ from this and from each other, though both draw upon a gentle envy, "a sadness which is not akin to pain." In the works of Gilbert and Sullivan there bubbles a delicious good-natured satire, infinitely different from, and infinitely preferable to, the vicious and distorted polemics of the day. The atmosphere of Dickens' David is also that of a time when—though children might suffer and innocent lives be wrecked—the foundations of society were at least stable and no tomorrow threatened the total destruction of any today.

The popularity of these productions is, each in its own way, an expression of the longing, not for "a land flowing with milk and honey," but for some sort—for almost any sort—of certitude. It is a longing not based on hope of acquisition. It is a nostalgia. And, like the temporary satisfaction of a desire for escape furnished by "The Scarlet Pimpernel," its theatrical indulgence is something for which "all sorts and conditions of men" clamor to pay.

Irrepressible Inflationists.

Although the decision in the gold clause cases affirmed the validity of obligations incurred by the Government of the United States, it has done little to chasten the monetary tinkerers. On the contrary, the inflationists appear decidedly heartened by the practical implications of the Supreme Court decision, which make it virtually certain that holders of United States bonds containing a gold clause can obtain no compensation for losses suffered through breach of contract.

Under the circumstances, the more radical and irresponsible elements in Congress are not likely to waste time sorrowing over the implied rebuke in the Court's statement that the Constitution does not contemplate "a vain promise." To many it seems as if the Court had merely offered the inflationists an invitation to proceed with new plans for devaluing or diminishing the purchasing power of the dollar. That is evident from the renewed interest taken in plans to speed up the silver buying program, issue fiat money, and embark upon a far more grandiose spending program than the Administration has projected.

At this critical junction the American Liberty League has come forward opportunely with a reminder of the economic losses and financial collapse sustained by European countries that have embarked upon uncontrolled inflation. The facts are familiar to students of monetary theory, but there is a pressing need for public enlightenment concerning the dangers of inflationary experiments, whether they take the form of currency issues or of excessive credit expansion.

Dr. Edwin F. Kemmerer, a banking expert with extensive experience in reorganizing national currency systems, also expressed alarm over the prospect of an inflationary debauch in his address Sunday before the Washington Town Hall. Both the American Liberty League and the professor from Princeton emphasize the necessity of striving for budgetary balance. Continuing deficits lead ultimately, as they well know, to inflation, no matter how sound the monetary views of Government officials and legislators may be. Such inflation may take various forms, the most familiar of which is issuance of fiat money. But credit is, as the American Liberty League notes, an engine of inflation which is "much more powerful under our banking system than currency."

Financial stability is therefore threatened both by the groups that indorse a policy of deliberate inflation and by the spenders who want to pile up deficits necessitating resort to inflation. The danger is made all the greater because of the existing potentialities of credit expansion, resulting from legislation that has given the Administration unprecedented powers over the country's credit mechanism. So far it has refrained from exercising those powers to the full. But it is easy to conceive of conditions under which restraint would no longer be possible.

Prof. Kemmerer thinks that one of the best methods of curbing excessive outlays lies in making the public tax conscious by imposing levies upon small incomes and special taxes whose incidence will be felt sufficiently to create sentiment in favor of economy. Undoubtedly the vital importance of balanced budgets must be brought home if we are to avoid disasters of currency collapse witnessed in Europe.

Prof. Kemmerer's view that the situation here is "rapidly getting out of control" is unnecessarily gloomy. But it soon would be beyond control if the inflationist group in Congress had their way. The result would be an expansion of credit or of currency, or both, that would seriously impair or destroy the value of all existing contractual relations and bring ruin to millions.

2,000,000 Back To The Farm.

From the Detroit News.

Those who have been discussing theoretically the best way to decentralize industry and to take workers out of the cities and place them on the land where they may be partially self-sustaining, will be glad to learn that the trick is being turned without any outside help.

Cornell University's agricultural department has taken much interest in the problem and has made some studies. Recently at the university's "Farm and Home Week" a report was made that more than 2,000,000 people moved from city to country in the United States during the last two years. And most of them became part-time farmers who raise part of their living from the soil and continue their employment in town.

Impractical Pacifists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent editorial in The Post entitled "A Growing Military Machine" is a much needed word of sanity and a timely note of warning.

It is too bad that the hysterical advocates in the House of a peacetime spending program almost without precedent were so busy using their mouths to shout down amendments and denounce pacifists that they could not use their minds either to read or to think.

A little thoughtful consideration would show that piling up a huge military machine is not only playing into the hands once more of our own munitions racketeers, but is giving aid and comfort to potential enemies abroad by justifying these in increasing their own "defense" establishments.

Military propagandists do not seem able to distinguish between cause and effect. They can not see that they contribute to that very danger of war that they fear, for war does not merely "come," like the gentle rains from heaven. It is deliberately planned and prepared for and the worst perils to peace are the professional jingoists and munitions profiteers.

A Congressman is quoted as denouncing pacifists for refusing to be practical. Does he regard war as practical?

Pacifists are impractical in just one respect. Their numbers are steadily and rapidly increasing, but not enough of them make their views public in unmistakable terms.

Pink Slip Reactions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is behind all this ballyhoo for repeal of the publicity clause of the income-tax law? Is it the fears of some of our worthy rich that the publication of the amount of their tax may lead to information being given to the tax officials that may lead to higher assessments?

All this drool about giving criminals a line on possible victims is pure bunk. The assessed valuations of real estate have been made public for many years. Yet nobody clamors for keeping these valuations secret. WHIDDER GRAHAM.
New York, Feb. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me congratulate the editor of The Post, a man brave enough to publish on February 22 in the Capital of the United States, the editorial on "The Pink Slips."

There is nothing I could add to the facts you give, except that if not repealed as you demand, we, the ordinary citizens, will have to endure the result after March 15, 1935, of the criminal racketeer.

Some one said the other day in a letter to this department that everyone making out an income tax report should ignore the pink slip. If I read the act correctly, failure to file the pink slip means the Revenue Department will then fine the citizen $5 and order some clerk to fill it out for public inspection. Why not have a new Boston Tea Party by joining me in a blank-sworn refusal to fill it out and write across the slip "We protest the right of the Revenue Department to destroy the privacy of our homes and we stand on our constitutional rights in refusing to fill out the blank."

Veterans' Justification.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding your recent editorial, "No Place for Compromise," the writer can not recall that The Post has ever discussed, editorially, the question of whether or not a soldier, who gave up his job to join the military forces in 1917, was entitled to $1 or $1.25 a day in addition to his basic pay of $30 per month. I doubt if any newspaper would have voiced an objection to this proposal during the war.

The military personnel of the American forces were not made up of a class, nor do the survivors constitute a class. This body of men represents all classes.

The veterans, however, are justified in asking that they be treated no differently than farmers, as a class, who are paid cash for not raising crops.

The veteran is required to pay money direct to cotton growers, as a class, every time he buys a shirt. He is required to pay money direct to wheat growers, as a class, every time he buys a loaf of bread for his family, etc., etc.

Is not the veteran justified in attempting to cash a certificate that is being lessened in value every day by Government spending on special classes? H. G. L.

Seeks Dyer Family.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am an old colored man, close to 85 years of age. When I was a young man I was employed as a butler to the family of Gen. Albert Dyer, who lived on I street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, in Washington. Gen. Dyer was commander at the arsenal and used to entertain lavishly at his home.

I remember Gen. Grant, who was President at the time, coming to Gen. Dyer's receptions.

I would like to get in touch with some of the family and descendants of Gen. Dyer, as I would like to hear of the family.

If there are any of Gen. Dyer's acquaintances, who know of his family descendants, I would appreciate any information that they could give me. I am not seeking any financial aid, but simply would like to know of the Dyer family.

Old Clothes From Congress?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to commend the recent letter of Mr. Alexander Sydney Lanier in The Post, headed "Reap the Whirlwind."

For myself, I have resolved not to buy any of the so-called "Baby Bonds" of the United States, reported to be issued next month. There is nothing to prevent the holders being paid in whatever the fancy of Congress might designate—old clothes, for instance!

WATSON WILLIAMS.

Mencken Without Honor?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with mixed feeling I read the high, wide and handsome gesture of one H. L. Mencken, wherein he invites to the "Free State" a polyglot of citizens whose ideas may find room for expansion in our free air.

In the first place, who gave Mr. Mencken the authority to extend such an invitation couched in the language reported in the name of the citizens of Maryland?

There is no doubt that we are very tolerant of many peculiar things—and there are many citizens of Maryland with intellectual status far above par who are not particularly enthusiastic regarding the ideas publicly broadcast by this same Mencken. There might come a time when this gentleman might find it convenient, or be asked to find a rarer atmosphere than Maryland.

As a member of a family having much to do with the history of the State from its founding, I think it is time such undesirable notoriety be abandoned by the press as it strains our sense of humor.

Blessing The Hounds.

Is there a formal blessing of the hunt by a bishop in full canonicals when the English season opens for the Cottesmore, the Quorn and other famous packs? We recall no such ceremony in all pages of Trollope nor in the delightful tales of Irish hunting by Montgomery and Ross. Perhaps it had pontifical importance in the golden age of fox hunting, but allusions to it in the sporting chronicles of our own times are sadly lacking. It is all the more curious, therefore, to find the custom flourishing today in Kentucky. At the first meet of the season of the Iroquois pack of Lexington, the Protestant Episcopal bishop of the diocese joined the 40 red-coated hunters "and pronounced the medieval ritual of blessing the hounds."

Lest the foolish should scoff and the judicious grieve, the good bishop explained that the service was instituted in the Middle Ages, when the multiplication and rapacity of foxes left many a farmer with a gooseless Christmas dinner. The hunting of the fox was a joy to the hunters and a mercy to the farmers. What more natural than that blessings should be called down upon the hounds for their contribution to the serviceable pleasures of the great and the protection of the yeoman's poultry yard from the forays of his unresting enemy?

The Bishop of Lexington seems to have delivered a short sermon on this occasion in which he justified fox hunting not alone upon the ground that it was conducive to the well being of hunter and horse and hound and poultry, but that it was spiritually helpful. The bishop had evidently deliberated over the matter and decided that if the hunt would not attend divine worship in church on Sunday morning, the church must pursue it to its worldly rendezvous on week days. Of course, if the bishop is himself a lover of hunting (and how could a man be a good bishop in Kentucky if he were not?) the practice will undoubtedly spread. But there are other bishops, not of the bluegrass country, whom we can not imagine following the hounds with anything but painful disapproval.

The Post Impressionist

Mrs. Sanger, Please!

Post Office, Tuesday.

SAID William F. Ogburn to Warren S. Thompson:

"I believe that, in a few years, we'll be hearing a great yell about the danger of our Nation being extinguished because of depopulation."

Said Warren S. Thompson to William F. Ogburn:

"I'm surprised that the cry hasn't started already."

And Dr. Ogburn is professor of sociology at the University of Chicago; he was a member of President Hoover's committee on social trends.

And Dr. Thompson has been a member of the faculties of the University of Michigan and Cornell; he is director of the Scripps Foundation for Research in Population.

* * *

A full 137 years have passed—not a mere "century and a quarter," as Dr. Ogburn says—since that Cambridge contemporary of Coleridge, the Rev. Thomas Robert Malthus (a Church of England clergyman, if you please!) wrote his "Essay on the Principle of Population as it Affects the Future Improvement of Society." He declared that the world was headed straight for over-population.

At first, Malthus shocked everybody, not so much by his prediction as by the implications of how to prevent its fulfillment. Then——

But you know the story. It runs the formal way common among both scientific and pseudo-scientific theories. It was condemned. It was investigated. It was believed.

Now it is being discredited—with how much or how little reason let the scientists themselves say.

* * *

"About 15 years ago," writes Dr. Ogburn, "research on the subject of population yielded . . . interesting and important discoveries, quite contrary to the doctrine of over-population."

* * *

Dr. Ogburn has had his say in The Saturday Review of Literature, reviewing Enid Charles' book, "The Twilight of Parenthood," which he describes as the opening gun of a forthcoming general attack upon modern Malthusianism. He says those 1920 researches "showed that the rate of population-increase in the United States and western Europe, not counting immigration, was high only because of the unusually large percentage of young adults in the population among whom the birth-rate is high and the death-rate is low. If there were not this favorable age-distribution, there would be, right now, no increases, but an actual decrease."

Pointing out that "this favorable age-distribution is temporary," Dr. Ogburn stresses the conclusion that, "when it becomes normal again, the population increase will fall, even if the fertility of married couples should remain exactly the same, which it will not do. The increase of our population is thus," he argues, "quite deceptive as to our fertility.

"We are nearer the precipice than we thought."

* * *

How near?

The answer to that question Dr. Ogburn finds in the results of other population-researches.

He says: "By projecting forward into the future the birth-rate and the death-rate curves, only recently available for the United States, a declining population is indicated long before the present century comes to a close—unless something is done about it."

* * *

Here is the Anti-Malthusians' opportunity. And it appears that they are at last going to make the most of it. Witness "The Twilight of Parenthood" aforesaid.

They are going to popularize those population-researches. They are going to raise the hue and cry which Dr. Thompson and Dr. Ogburn foresaw—or should one say "foreheard?"

"Eventually," adds Dr. Ogburn, "we shall have taxation of bachelors and bonuses for babies." Congress will probably "open the gates again to immigrants from Europe."

* * *

Not that Mr. Ogburn is at all alarmed for the immediate future or overly alarmed for a future more remote. He has the scientist's blinkered faith in science—which we are far from saying is always unjustified.

On the other hand, says he, "it is well to remember that, though we may have a decreasing population some time . . . such is not the situation now. At present the United States is growing by nearly a million persons a year." On the other hand, Dr. Ogburn notes the supposition that "population-rates are, like inflation, hard to stop. The habits of a people are slow to change. The death-rate has reached its lowest trough and will rise from now on. The birth-rate is still decreasing." Even when the latter rate comes to a standstill, "it may be too low to maintain population."

* * *

He doesn't strike us as very clear as to how this is to be effected. But he is quite crystalline concerning one thing: he believes we are destined for the anti-Malthusian propaganda "much more powerful than the propaganda used in putting over the Liberty Loans of wartime or the NRA. . . ."

What are the Malthusians going to do about it?

The Rough Guy Balks Bum's Rush Proposal

Special Correspondence to The Post.

NEW YORK'S most pressing problem at the moment is what to do with The Rough Guy. Mayor LaGuardia says he's got to go. Park Commissioner Moses says he's got to go. But the question is, "Where?" Ever since Frederick MacMonnies' heroic statue of "Civic Virtue" reared its curly marble head in City Hall Park in 1922 it has been a sort of civic center for public quarrels. It was immediately christened The Rough Guy by irreverent reporters and almost as promptly assailed as an insult to womanhood by a group of feminine protesters from Brooklyn.

Like the Pulitzer fountain, which the city allowed to crumble slowly away in Central Park Plaza, the monument is a gift from private donors, a happy thought of the heirs of Mrs. Angelina Crane, who may have to be consulted about the removal. It depicts a burly youth with a club over his shoulder and several female figures coiled about his feet.

These are supposed to represent vice, corruption and "pernicious influence." Lady critics of the sculpture maintain that the nude gladiator is brutally walking on the heads and faces of these figures. MacMonnies has repeatedly insisted that the young man's feet are firmly planted on the rock and that he is entirely oblivious to the siren-like creatures who can't get above his shoe-tops, if he had any. That 1922 is a long way back is also illustrated by the fact that the group was once criticized for its nudity.

The monument was installed while Red Mike was Mayor. Having a keen sense of publicity, he probably enjoyed the row. But there was very little interest in civic virtue as a subject during the Hylan administration or any of those which followed it until LaGuardia was elected. It seems almost an anomaly that he should decide to kick "Civic Virtue" out.

• • • •

LAGUARDIA says the lad is Hylan's baby. Red Mike, from Palm Beach, indignantly denies any part in The Rough Guy's parentage and Mrs. Hylan supports him. Domestic Virtue is one of Hylan's strong points. Moses says, "Off to the woods with it—the thicker the better." The sculptor sigh wearily and says he doesn't give a hoot. Meanwhile, however, I. N. Phelps Stokes, president of the Art Commission, Mayor LaGuardia's pet abomination, on which he has trampled much more lustily than The Rough Guy ever did on the sirens, has come to life with the announcement that no permission whatever has been granted to move the statue anywhere. Various civic organizations are rallying to the defense of their imperiled virtue and it looks now as though he were going to spill another first-class row all over again.

The immediate cause of the difficulty is the approaching eradication of the old Government Postoffice, that eyesore of the early U. S. Grant period which reared its ugly bulk at the apex of the City Hall triangle and spoiled all parking possibilities. Now that it is to go into the wreckers' wagons Commissioner Moses has elaborate beautification plans into which "Civic Virtue" does not fit. At the present writing, however, it looks as though The Rough Guy is going to prove as obstinate as the old postoffice was.

ANOTHER more or less famous New York figure also seems to be in a state of unstable equilibrium. Mussolini apparently is easing up a bit in his gouge of Emperor Hailie Selassie and the Black Eagle, Harlem's sartorial hero and aviator extraordinary, doesn't know whether to fly to Abyssinia or not.

The Black Eagle (Col. Hubert Julian to you) denies a report that he hopped off for Addis Ababa, the Abyssinian capital, last week. He admits, however, that he is looking around for a couple of bombers and some speedy combat planes. There are seven colored aviators who have pilots' licenses and he hopes they will all accompany him to Aden, which, so to speak, is just around the corner from Addis Ababa. He says he is not afraid of the overwhelming Italian air force. He remembers the seven against Thebas.

The Black Eagle is most particularly fussed up about a nasty report that Hailie Selassie, his good friend of other days, is still mad at him and doesn't want him at Addis Ababa for fighting, flying, conversation or any other purpose. The Black Eagle was present at the Emperor's coronation and, in an unfortunate contretemps, managed to crack up the only royal plane. The reverberations of the remarks made at that time were heard clear over here in America. But Col. Hubert Julian says all that is forgiven and forgotten and exhibits a somewhat cryptic cablegram from Teclemarcros, the Abyssinian minister of state, to prove it. It reads: "Congratulations. Do as you like."

But do not assume that, meanwhile, all is peace in Harlem. On the contrary! Italy is being made to feel the scorn of another race. The boycott is on. Spaghetti joints stand idle, spumoni is at a discount and as for olives—why, up in Harlem they have even abandoned their Martinis to drink straight gin!

MRS. ELIZABETH MANDEL, the lady from Far Rockaway, who has been suffering from squirrel trouble, is gradually easing her situation by a kind of reversed faith cure. She has been applying the hate cure, and she reports that it works.

Readers of this column will recall that Mrs. Mandel's home, the former Russell Sage mansion, was virtually stormed and captured by the furry pests who ate holes in her Persian carpets, made off with her fresh-baked cakes and, just in a spirit of good, clean fun, occasionally dropped down her neck. First off, Mrs. Mandel bought traps with which the younger squirrels played push ball. Then she sprinkled camphor, about which the squirrels considered a rare delicacy. In desperation she arranged for a visitation of Boy Scouts. "Nuts!" said the squirrels and kept right on chewing. Finally, not having a hunting license, she appealed to the State conservation department which, in the last legal analysis, is responsible for squirrels. They sent her some pamphlets and gave her permission to employ an exterminating company. But the quirrels continued to get in her hair.

Then she tried hate. At first she only did her hating a couple of hours a day and the squirrels thought she was kidding. But she gradually put on the pressure and spaced her hate periods so they covered morning, noon and night. Night proved the best time of all, because she could hear the squirrels conducting cotillions in the attic.

Well, the squirrels, kindly little beasts by nature, didn't like it a bit. They began to leave in a huff. Of course, this interfered some with Mrs. Mandel's hating. She found she could flop down and rest a minute from her housework without sitting on a squirrel, and this tended to induce a mood of happiness entirely unsuited to hating. Nevertheless, Mrs. Mandel feels that while there is a single squirrel left, or even a married couple, she will be able to concentrate sufficient unkind thoughts on him, or them, eventually to solve her problem.

It is a fact that the squirrels are migrating to Hollis. Hollis is in Queens, which the Department of Agriculture reported to be the healthiest spot in the United States. It is true that in response to protests from chambers of commerce everywhere, but chiefly in California and Florida, this was denied. But the squirrels probably read the first report and not the second, for they are obviously seeking a healthier atmosphere in which to recover from the spiritual impact of Mrs. Mandel's hate.

Radio censors are a queer lot. In a recent broadcast, sponsored by an automobile company, reference was made to a new invention—roller skates without any rollers, so the skater wouldn't fall down and hurt himself. The artists received the following communication:

"Since roller skates are a means of transportation from one place to another, and consequently might be considered in competition with automobiles, please omit the line about roller skates."

Freight Trains Meet in Tunnel; 9 Suffer Hurts

Injured Trainmen Taken to Oak Hill Hospital; Engineer Scalded.

By the Associated Press.

Oak Hill, W. Va., Feb. 25.—Nine trainmen were injured today in the head-on collision of two freight trains of the Virginian Railroad near the Wriston tunnel in the mountains five miles from Oak Hill.

The injured were brought to the Oak Hill Hospital in ambulances. Engineer E. W. Eskew, 36, of Page, W. Va., was scalded, and hospital attaches said he was the most seriously injured.

Brakeman B. L. Graham, 40, of Mullens, slightly hurt, described the accident after he was brought to the hospital.

"I don't know how it happened," Graham said. "The trains ran together head-on. Most of the men were able to get off the trains themselves, but we had to take some of them off.

Fraternity to Dine.

The Once Over

Gambling on Golf Tournaments.

Pari mutuel betting on big golf tournaments was introduced at Agua Caliente the other day, and the day may be near when playing the golfers may become as simple as playing the ponies.

• • • •

A golfing tip sheet listing Sarazen as "Our Long Shot Special," or proclaiming Johnny Farrell as "Today's Sleeper" is the next logical developmeht.

• • • •

Every major tournament may hear the queries, "What do you hear about Dutra? Is he hot or cold?" "Are they shooting with Turnesa today?" and "Is it true Cooper had a nine-hole workout yesterday morning in 32 flat?"

• • • •

Possible Comment.

Gene Sarazen—Has been prepped for this one.

Harry Cooper—Last was not his best; will bear watching.

Denny Shute—Powerful stretch runner; last was not true.

Bill Mehlhorn—Has done well when properly placed.

Billy Burke—Hasn't shown much lately.

W. Schmalz—Last in all his starts.

Elmer Twitchell—Will win when there is a penalty for ball in fairway.

O. Howe Dumm—Pass this one. Has spent most of time in traps during his last 26 starts.

• • • •

And then, too, the golf correspondents will probably have to report the big links battles after the fashion of the race tracks:

$5,000 Wistaria Open. All weights.

First—Paul Runyan, $18.20, $5.90 and $4.40.

Second—Byron Nelson, $15.60 and $10.30.

Third—Al Zimmerman, $8.60.

Went to tee at 2:05. Off at 2:11. Won breezing. Runyan was off in a tangle, got into trouble at the turn, but recovered and finished courageously. Nelson was slow to get going but responded well under pressure and might have won in another hole. Zimmerman came from a long way back. Will do better next time out. Johnny Dawson made a good effort but couldn't get through. Denny Shute beat the gate and led for first nine holes but collapsed badly when crowded. Revolta, a clocker's tip, was short and didn't like course. Hagen broke down. Sarazen was left at the post.

• • • •

All in all, it looks like an exciting golf season, straight, place and show.

• • • •

But we shudder to think of the language a gambler may use when the golfer he picks loses by a six-inch putt on the last green.

Safeguarding Conservatism.

Justice Elmer Twitchell today handed down an opinioin that all poker debts contracted during the last three years are payable in I. O. U.s of the present weight and thickness.

Rear Admiral Byrd announces that his expedition is in debt. Probably a case of frozen assets.

Ima Dodo says that the Supreme Court was not positive the gold bonds were in Uncle Sam's handwriting, although the word "gold" seemed similar in all the exhibits.

One thing the gold clause decision did was to uphold the contention of many people that it is foolish to bother with reading what's on the back of a bond or railroad ticket anyhow.

No End of Books

Clews, Thrills And Six-Shooters—Being Tonics Of The Week For Sedentary Sluggishness.

By Theodore Hall.

THERE'S a small pile of books beside me which would unsettle any toupee. Starting right out in home territory—and I hope nobody living by the Old Reservoir in Georgetown is going to turn sensitive on us—our old friend, "Diplomat," sets a peculiarly gory and unpleasant demise in the garden of a "Little Red House on R St."

Victim in "The Brain Trust Murder" (Coward-McCann, $2) is chunky Prof. Morehead, kingpin in the hypothetical Administration's hypothetical Brain Trust. ("Diplomat" says he hasn't been Simonpure imaginative in the construction of characters, but then neither has he any intention of being embarrassingly definite—which means you can have a little private fun assigning the roles, if you wish.) When Dennis Tyler, diplomatic detective and chief of the Bureau of Current Political Intelligence, and Admiral Bryan, chief of Naval Intelligence, join forces on the law and order side and walk into the garden, this is the pretty scene they find: The professor lying in an inert and distracted state (to be frank, he's quite headless); the professor's assistant out cold on the ground; the cranium of said professor nestling in the crook of said assistant's arm, and a two-foot machete nearby suggesting the means of death quite adequately.

• • • •

ALL mixed up in the how-de-do are a smooth Cuban-born but American grandee, a glowering old political columnist who detests the New Deal, a slithery Caucasian princess who (rejoice that the type is still with us!) has "an immemorial wisdom in her eyes," a West Indian butler who wears a purple skull cap, the pretty secretary of the deceased, and any number of bright-faced New Dealers. A blood-stained goat leads us into the voodoo theme, done to a turn which will be relished by any reader of William Seabrook and Capt. John Craige. Though I must say that ouangas and tom-toms sound a little creaky in R street. And beyond the immediate scene there are involved some very crucial fleet maneuvers in the Caribbean and the burning of the "El Morro" off Barnegat.

"Diplomat"—"Jay Franklin," of Vanity Fair—or J. Franklin Carter, late of the State Department, has concocted a jittery, thoroughly farfetched but equally entertaining yarn. Readers of his "Slow Death at Geneva" and "The Corpse on the White House Lawn" will recognize his talents for making an E. Phillips Oppenheim hullaballoo out of fairly familiar elements. Very amusing is his device of solving the murder by subjecting the characters to the rigors of a Washington summer-time drinking party.

If you just don't care for voodoo, you can content yourself well with such local color or with certain of Mr. Carter's jibes. "Only in detective stories does the man to whom all the facts point as murderer prove to be pure as a driven Congressman," may do for a sample. And this neat simile I liked: "The scene was, in fact, as blandly smug and relaxing as a whisky advertisement."

But a little blue ribbon must go to the blurb-writer, who retails this: "'Diplomat' insists that whatever may be the repressed wishes of many worthy citizens, 'The Brain Trust Murder' is pure invention, and is not to be considered a way to end the economic depression."

HERBERT ADAMS, sturdy veteran in the mystery field, put his last corpse in a country club locker room—"The Golf House Murder." That notion must have satisfied, vicariously, a large body of golfers, and their sentiments must have encouraged Mr. Adams. For now, in "The Body in the Bunker" (Lippincott, $2), he brings to a head the little murderous impulses of the fairway and the rough, and we find the body of Golfer Crosbie non compos in a bunker quaintly known as "Hell's." Just such a demon bunker, as Mr. Adams tells, as the one in Scotland out of which a visiting bishop drove with one superhuman and inspired shot—whereat the caddy remarked: "When ye dee, tak' y'r niblick wi' ye."

The murder is plausible enough, the tale most competently written, and the reams of golf lore should please the fraternity.

On Joseph Lincoln's eminent domain of Cape Cod Phoebe Atwood Taylor has been staking out a claim of her own in the sleuthing activities of that likable Down Easter detective, Asey Mayo. His latest adventure, "The Tinkling Symbol" (Norton, $2), starts out with a bankrupt banker stabbed through a screen door as he sits on his front stoop. What with shots in the dark (one nips Asey), woman falling mysteriously off a cliff and a slew of trick clues, we come pretty close to that oddest of phenomena—hysteria on Cape Cod. Asey's dialect and native wit are as choice as ever, and he wins through with great satisfaction all around. Recommended for everyone who ever read Joe Lincoln or ate a cranberry.

GOOD gaudy Westerns are still with us, praise be. Jackson Gregory's "Valley of Adventure" (Dodd Mead, $2) is on the dear old pattern of the young lady school teacher going West to see life in "God's country." First in New Mexico, then in the high mountain meadows of Montana, she has her stalwart defender amid the perils of rival ranchers shooting it out over water rights. Top-notch. Frank C. Robertson's "Forbidden Trails" (Washburn, $2), his twenty-fifth yarn, put young "Canada" in the employ of the rancher who did his father dirt—and revenge is sweet. Robert Ames Bennett, who's done more than 30 of them, didn't stretch himself for the title of his latest—"Death Rides the Range" (Washburn, $2). But he packed his tale with gun-fighting enough to justify it—all on the rancher's-son-who-made-good theme.

For a different view of the Western scene, you'll enjoy Dane Coolidge's "Long Rope" (Dutton, $2). Gun-play steps back-stage in this one, to allow for the very real excitement of watching two doughty cowboys fight out their professional rivalry in bronco-busting, steer-roping and hog-tying. Mr. Coolidge knows the real McCoy on man-killing steers and stallions and on the men of the old West who took them in the day's work. While you're riding high, wide and handsome in your armchair, yo won't miss the six-guns for a minute.

Best Biography

By
Wm. Lyon Phelps

THERE is perhaps nothing more interesting to many minds than a good biography; it has all the charm of fiction with all the satisfaction of being real. I say real rather than true, because no man in a biography or autobiography can write the exact truth. The two or three exceptions to this only prove the rule.

For prominent men in American history, the best one-volume "Life of Lincoln" is by the Englishman, Lord Charnwood. The best two-volume life of Lincoln is by Carl Sandburg, called "The Prairie Years." It closes with his departure to Washington to take the Presidency. In connection with this, one should read "Mary Lincoln," also by Carl Sandburg.

The best one-volume life of Washington that I have seen is called "George Washington Himself," by John C. Fitzpatrick. The best two-volume "Life of Daniel Webster" is by Claude Fuess, now principal of Phillips Academy, at Andover. The best "Life of John Marshall" is by the late Senator Beveridge, who surprised all those who thought he could not do it.

• • • •

The best life of Gen. Lee is the one just published by Freeman, in four volumes. Joseph Hergesheimer wrote an admirable biography of Sheridan. I have read a number of biographies of Grant, Sherman, Jackson—but for Grant I recommend his own "Memoirs," and for the other two I don't know which one I like the best.

The best life of our great song writer, Stephen C. Foster, is by John Tasker Howard, triply qualified to write it by scholarship, style and by musicianship. The best life of that intellectual aristocrat Henry Adams is by himself and is called "The Education of Henry Adams." The best life of Mark Twain, which should surely be reread in this centennial year, is in three volumes, written by Albert Bigelow Paine. This is one of the best biographies ever written in America.

Takoma Man Dies; Crash Driver Held

Billie Marlin Killed; Paul Miley Is Accused.

Billie E. Marlin, 30, of 105 Flower avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was killed yesterday when the automobile in which he was a passenger collided with a heavy truck at Flower avenue and Sligo street.

Police said the automobile, driven by Paul Miley, of the 3500 block of Tenth street northwest, ran through a traffic signal directly into the path of the truck, which was operated by William F. Lake, 21, of the first block of Hickory avenue, Takoma Park.

The impact smashed the automobile against a telephone pole. Marlin was hurled beneath the debris. He was taken to Washington Sanitarium. Physicians said he was dead on arrival.

Police took Miley into custody under $1,000 bond, and State's Attorney James H. Pugh said a manslaughter charge would be made against him. He was treated for cuts and bruises after the crash.

Company Holdings Subject To Taxes

Court Rules Duveen Estate Must Pay On Earnings.

The estate of Louis Joel Duveen, a member of the firm of Duveen Bros., Inc., which dealt in buying and selling of antiques in London, Paris and New York, will have to pay a tax on his entire holdings in the corporation even though, at the time of his death, he owed several hundred thousand dollars on those holdings.

That was decided yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals, in an opinion written by Chief Justice George Martin.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue had levied an assessment on the $130,463.30 paid by Louis Duveen and had held that the contract binding him to pay $552,534.54 was taxable at $112,853.31. The appellate court eliminated the contract's estimated value and held that since the title to the stock was in Duveen's name, the estate would have to pay an estate tax on his entire ownings.

The four Duveen brothers—Henry J., Sir Joseph and Benjamin, of New York, and Louis, of London—formed the corporation in 1918. There were 22,000 shares of preferred and 10,000 shares of common, all of which, with the exception of qualifying shares, were to be owned by the brothers.

The Federal levy was for estate taxes.

President Could Turn Defeat to Advantage

Chance Offered To Shift Recovery Responsibility To Business of Country.

By Elliott Thurston.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT might well turn defeat in the Senate on his works relief program to his own advantage.

His primary concern is to revive private business. The problem all along has been and still is how to induce business men to go ahead. Broadly, two schools of thought exist. The pump-primers do not believe business will revive unless the Government spends for goods produced by consumption and heavy industry. They argue that the Government must substitute its spending for that normally originating with private investors and spenders. And they contend that by its spending the Government must not only provide orders for heavy industry, where the depression is the most acute, but that Government funds must furnish the buying power among the masses needed to create sufficient demand for consumption as well as durable goods.

This, roughly, is the theory behind Mr. Roosevelt's program for a $4,880,000,000 relief appropriation to be spent in making work for an estimated 3,500,000 of employable unemployed now on direct relief or the "dole." In addition, Mr. Roosevelt lays heavy stress on the question of morale. He believes that the man on the dole loses self-respect and becomes ripe for conversion to radicalism, whereas the man for whom the Government creates a job retains his self-respect and his faith in his government.

The overwhelmingly dominant view among business men, however, is that, conceding the humanitarian argument, business can not be revived by spending. On the contrary, according to this school of thought, the spending, while it may give a temporary impetus as long as the money lasts, does not create a condition or a psychology for permanent recovery. As long as the spending is looked upon as it is among most business men as jeopardizing the budget and threatening inflation, or heavy taxes—as long as the prospect for making a profit is overcast by the danger that the profit would be lost in inflation or taxation—business men will not of their own initiative go ahead to modernize or extend their plants, to produce goods and to hire more workers.

THERE is, of course, a third school consisting of those who have no faith that lasting revival can be produced under a capitalistic economy, whether by its own initiative or under the stimulus of Government spending. However, these doubters are in a political minority and both the New Deal and its left and right wing opponents in Congress are committeed to recovery under a capitalistic, profit-motive economy.

As between the pump-primers and the second school, the question largely is whether buying power must be distributed first in order to create a demand for goods or whether goods will be produced ahead of actual demand. Theorists probably never will agree on this issue. But past experience persuades the business man that "confidence" is the real solvent. That is, if the people in general believe that the future is reasonably secure, that they can safely invest in new houses or automobiles or anything else, the buying power will appear—especially under the credit system established in this country. In other words, most business men think that there is a sufficient latent buying power now existing to create a demand for literally billions of dollars worth of new things of all sorts.

Hence the great emphasis put upon the much used word "confidence." As it is commonly used the word means confidence that the budget will be brought under control, that the dollar will not be demoralized, that profits can be made, that taxes will not be ruinous, that our traditional form of government and economic system are to endure—reformed or improved, yes, but not destroyed.

• • • •

APART from all theorizing, it is evident that no one thing would so reassure the business men of the country as to have the relief bill cut down from $4,880,000,000 to, say, $1,880,000,000, as Senator Glass, among others, urges. Not only do most business men doubt the efficacy and efficiency of the made-work program—and they can point to its lack of success both here and abroad—but most of all they fear that the cost spells ultimate ruin of the budget—inflation. They doubt that the Government once committed to made-work can ever turn back. In the end they see disaster. Whether they are mistaken is really beside the point. As long as this is the prevailing attitude business will not go ahead.

Mr. Roosevelt has asserted that the Government must get out of the business of relief. He has urged that the problem be turned back to the States as rapidly as possible. He is eager to bring his budget into balance.

He has a chance now to convert a setback in the Senate to his own real ends by approving a $1,880,000,000 sum for continuing relief as at present. He may thus escape the controversy over the "prevailing wage," in which labor is battling against its own true interests. He may also escape the charge that he does not know how or where he means to spend the originally proposed $4,880,000,000 in creating work. If and when his advisers develop definite plans, for example, for low-cost housing, rural electrification, etc., he can always ask Congress for authorizations. He might then extend his tax rule to provide that these expenditures be covered by revenue.

In this way, he could take another long step toward creating the confidence which the vast majority of business men consider all that is necessary to pave the way for a genuine recovery. If, then, business still lags, he will have a justification now lacking for substituting government for private enterprise.

At this moment, the chaos in the Senate affords an unexpected and perhaps a last opportunity for escaping from the dilemmas inherent in the made-work program and for giving to business that further reassurance which business men insist is what they need to go ahead on their own initiative.

Virginia's PWA Hastens Drafts Of Its Projects

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 25.—With projects costing nearly a quarter of a billion dollars suggested, the Virginia PWA authorities worked with haste on the final drafts of reports on the inventory of Virginia projects which might be started should the President $4,880,000,000 works-relief bill be passed by Congress.

The long anticipated program of the State highway department was submitted over the week-end, including projects of a total cost estimated at $25,000,000. It had been unofficially reported up to ten times that figure.

The largest program submitted was that of the new State conservation and development commission, which listed available projects that would cost approximately $100,000,000.

Still other large items were suggested by the State health department and other agencies of the Government.

Before the February deadline set by the State administration 660 projects with an estimated cost of $28,000,000 were filed by some of the cities, towns, counties and State institutions, and these did not include the suggested programs of several of the larger cities of the State.

How many people such a program would put to work was not estimated but a previous planning board survey estimated 20,000 men could be used in bringing Virginia's public works activity up to the standard of other State and municipal activity.

The projects include utilities, streets, highways, bridges, buildings, recreational facilities, shipping and terminal facilities, and other miscellaneous items such as irrigation, drainage, flood protection and control, reforestation, soil erosion and fish hatcheries.

Court Approves Radio Transfer

Acquisition By College Had Been Protested.

A decision of the Federal Communications Commission that enabled the transfer of Radio Station KWWG, located at Brownsville, Tex., to the Port Arthur College, at Port Arthur Tex., was sanctioned by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday over the protest of Magnolia Petroleum Co. and the Sabine Broadcasting Co., lessor and lessee, respectively, of Radio Station KFDM, at Beaumont, Tex.

Station KWWG was wrecked by a hurricane last year, and while it was out of commission it asked that it be permitted to transfer its station to the college, where the studio would be taken over by the college authorities and operated on the same waves.

Station KFDM objected and opposed the transfer, only to have the Communications Commission approve the move.

N. Y. Men Buy Virginia Mill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 25.—The Lewis Jones Knitting Co., pioneer enterprise of its kind in northern Virginia, has been purchased by New York interests for an undisclosed consideration, it was announced today.

The mill, incorporated in 1895 by the late Albert Baker, will be taken over about March 15. It will be known as the Winchester Knitting Mills, Inc., with George T. Seckel, jr., as president; Frank Kelleher, vice president, and William P. McGrail, secretary-treasurer. The plant will manufacture cotton-knit underwear for marketing through the company's New York office.

The mill was incorporated when Mr. Baker was moved by the plight of unemployed here and joined with Lewis Jones, of Philadelphia, to organize the company.

Bal Masque To Celebrate Russian Fete

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

"Maslenitza," the gayest festival on the old Russian calendar, will be celebrated here by the Russian colony with a colorful bal masque at the Shoreham Hotel March 9. This is the "last day of forgiveness" before Lent, a day—and night—of festivity. It will be remembered by many that the first celebration of this traditional feast day was held at old Linthicum Hall in Georgetown, last year, a party which didn't break up until the early hours of the morning. Even then the guests who came to watch the dancers and to admire the regal costumes of the Russian emigres found it hard to say "dosvedonya," until we meet again this year.

The motiff for the fete this year will be old Russian fairy tales, carried out in costumes and decorations. Famous legendary characters, dear to the hearts of all Russians as our Cinderella, Jack and the Bean Stalk, Snow White and other old favorites will step from the pages of Russian folk-lore to make merry at this, the great Lenten festival.

Pushkin, the famous Russian poet, whose fairy tales and delicious satire have amused generations of Russian children and grown-ups alike, wrote, among other delightful stories, "Ruslan and Ludmile," the all-powerful Tsar Sultan as the outstanding character. And at the forthcoming fete, this Tsar Sultan will be the central figure in the huge panel to be used as a background in the ballroom.

Prizes to Be Awarded.

Alexander Taranin and Mrs. Paul Scheffer are working on this and other decorations for the festival, when guests will appear as characters stepping from the pages of fairy tales. And prizes for the best costumes will be awarded by a committee of three, Mr. Eben Comins, Mr. Wolcott Waggaman and Mrs. Frederick Colby.

Many of the features of the celebration in Russia will be revived for the ball, but one of the most picturesque customs, that of the sleigh rides through the moonlight in the early morning after the dancing and entertainment, will be symbolized by hundreds of little bells hung on strings so that dancers will set them tinkling as they sweep across the floor.

Special Numbers Planned.

Dr. Paul Galtsoff, Miss Tania Blumenthal and Mr. Peter Rouzitsky are in charge of the entertainment program. There will be Russian gypsy singers, dancers and choruses. Lisa Gardiner and a group of her dancers are arranging special numbers for the festival, and Mischa Markoff, of the Casino Russe, will sing some of the traditional Maslenitza songs.

Others assisting Boris Timchenko, chairman of the ball committee, are Mrs. Alfred Myer, Capt. I. V. Mishtowt and Gen. Levandowsky; Mrs. Charles K. Mosher is in charge of arrangements for the buffet supper; and Mme. Mishtowt is chairman of the sponsors committee.

Proceeds will be for the benefit of St. Nicholas Russian Orthodox Church.

"SILENCE! SILENCE!" the courtroom bailiff repeated.

The room quieted. The voice of the judge was stern as he said:

"According to the verdict of the jury, rendered in this court on October 27th, 1934, I do now hereby sentence Sterling Anthony Van Houten to twenty years in Leavenworth Prison for using the United States mails to defraud."

Three years have passed . . . No, District Attorney Harry Langford did not accept the Federal Judgeship which was offered him. New Remedy Allays Fears Of Falling Hair

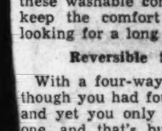
Tonic Checks Dandruff; Comfort Covers Keep Bedspreads Clean.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ALL WOMEN dread the idea of being bald. When their hair begins to fall out they become panic stricken and see themselves a few months hence with a shiny pate. As a matter of fact during certain seasons of the year it is perfectly normal for hair to fall out, but if it comes out in too great quantities there is cause for worry.



One of the chief reasons for this falling of hair is dandruff. And one of the most pernicious things to be rid of is dandruff. That is why a certain dandruff remedy sold at a downtown store is finding so much favor with shoppers. It's a soothing lotion that is excellent for scaly and irritated scalps. It restores natural oils and checks dandruff.

It's a blessing in its way because it's so simple to apply and does not leave the scalp greasy or sticky. It is quickly absorbed and immediately relieves the scalp of itching. Used regularly, in a short time any dandruff condition will show a 100 per cent improvement.

The tonic is put out by a French cosmetic concern which has found hundreds of followers in this country during the last several years. Perhaps the best known, and certainly one of the most popular products of this line, is the dandruff remedy.

Comfort Covers.

One of the best ways to save your downy comfort from the dust and strains it is sure to accumulate is to use a comfort cover such as one featured in a local store. It is available in at least a dozen cotton prints, all in attractive designs and myriads of colors.

The young housekeeper who has small children knows very well how careless they are about climbing over the bed regardless of sticky hands and dirty shoes. As a result the comforts all soon begin to show the ravages of playtime. One of these washable comfort covers will keep the comfort clean and new looking for a long time to come.

Reversible Suit Coats.

With a four-way suit you feel as though you had four different suits, and yet you only pay the price of one, and that's but $16.95.

Each suit has a reversible coat and skirt. On one side the coat is checked, on the other, plain. The skirt, too, is checked on one side, plain on the other. Now with this kind of a combination you may have a checked suit, or a solid color suit, a suit with a checked skirt and plain coat, or a checked coat and plain skirt.

The suits are beautifully tailored and look as though they might have been designed in Paris. And yet, you'll find them in the budget corner of a local store.

The Kit's a Hit!

Last year a well-known beauty expert met the demand for new and still more attractive kits with a patent leather manicure kit which looked jaunty, held all your nail essentials and was one of the beauty hits of the season. But there were many who were forced to merely admire, as the price of $5 was too hard on the budget.

This year, a large cosmetic concern comes forward with a duplicate of that kit and is charging only $1. Of course, the material is not genuine patent leather as it was in the other, and the preparations which it contains are not those of the beautician. But it's a nifty little kit and might easily pass as a twin to its more expensive cousin.

Brass Trays Attractive.

While there are hundreds, nay thousands, of attractive trays on display in Washington stores, there are none more practical than those shown in the brasswear section of a local shop. These come in all sizes, large, small or medium, and they're made from a high quality of brass that will last—and last. You'll be amazed at the modest prices.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Striking Similarities of Women in America And Australia Noted by Visitor From Sydney

Underwood & Underwood.

American women dress to achieve smartness, Australian women to accentuate their beauty, believes Dr. Marie Bentivogolio, noted Australian educator now visiting in Washington.

Dr. Marie Bentivoglio, Famous Writer and Teacher, Is Only Woman to Receive Ph.D. From Oxford University.

THE WOMEN of Australia and the United States are so much alike they present a study in comparison rather than contrast. The same spirit of independence rules both. In education, public service and sports, women of Australia are demonstrating their versatility and initiative. Their privileges of citizenship are being exercised with increasing appreciation.

"It is principally in clothes consciousness they differ," said attractive Dr. Marie Bentivoglio, famous writer, lecturer and teacher of Sydney, who is enjoying a visit in Washington as part of her leave of absence from the Sydney Teachers College.

"The Australian," Dr. Bentivoglio, continued, "chooses the apparel that in color and design is kindest to her. The American woman, in football phraseology, 'holds that line' against all odds, and achieves exceptional smartness sometimes at the expense of facial beauty."

Making Geographical Survey.

The Australian educator, who was the first woman ever to receive a Ph. D. from Oxford, will devote the next ten months to making a geographical survey of the United States. Intensely interested also in the economic and sociological make-up of the country, she is under contract to a group of British publications for a series of articles on her impressions here. Her other mission—one she enjoys most—is that of voluntary good will ambassador. The two countries, she thinks, having so much in common, should be better acquainted.

Having traveled the length and breadth of her own country, Europe and Africa, and even penetrated the Orient with the "seeing eye" of the scientist and geographer, Dr. Bentivoglio is approaching her American tour with keen relish. Landing on the Pacific Coast last month, she already has a passing acquaintance with California and States along the route to Washington.

"Hospitality and friendliness," she said, "seem to be the two distinguishing characteristics of Americans I've met so far. The youths here are outstanding for their vigor, enthusiasm and optimism. Their ambitions, like those of Australian youths, appear to be limitless."

Similarities Cited.

"California, with its mild, sunny climate, beautiful coast line and beaches, is reminiscent of New South Wales," she explained. "The prairies, scattered population and great cultivated areas of Nevada and surrounding States remind one of the plains of temperate Australia, while the semidesert land of New Mexico, Arizona and Texas is very much like central Australia."

Because of the scattered population of the country, there has been no definite youth movement in Australia, Dr. Bentivoglio said. Higher education is the rule rather than the exception for both boys and girls of today. No longer, either, is there a line drawn between the educational pursuits of men and women.

Women Poets Told Realism Is Need Today

Must See Life to Write About It, Declares Miss Taggard.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WOMEN POETS must come down out of their "ivory towers" and observe life at close range if they want their work to interpret modern existence.

Too long the world has thought of them as cloistered individuals who sit with their backs to the window, seeing life only as it is reflected in the mirror of imagination, and gaining inspiration more from reading than from their own experiences and observations.

The term "woman poet" must change its connotation, believes Miss Taggard. "It must come to mean an entirely different type of person from either Elizabeth Barrett Browning or Emily Dickinson," she said.

Demand for New Type Seen.

This was not meant as a criticism of those poets, Miss Taggard explained, but simply that a new type is in demand today—a poet who can interpret modern life because she is closely in touch with what is going on.

"One of the most popular literary figures of her time, Elizabeth Barrett Browning is remembered for only a few poems," Miss Taggard said. "This is probably because her sheltered existence kept her from knowing much about the outside world."

Her finished workmanship and the themes she selected were probably responsible for Elizabeth Browning's popularity in her own time, Miss Taggard thinks, "but her best work, 'Sonnets From the Portuguese,' was written around her own experience—which probably accounts for its wide appeal."

Emily Dickinson was one of the few poets, Miss Taggard feels, who led a hermit-like existence and yet wrote universally appealing poems. But few modern writers, she believes, can hope to have the flashes that characterize Emily Dickinson's work.

Enjoy Work on Biography.

Her opinion on this subject carries the weight of authority, for her book, "The Life and Mind of Emily Dickinson," is considered one of the most excellent biographies on "The Amherst Nun."

Discussing this work, Miss Taggard said, "I enjoyed writing it, because Emily Dickinson, the woman, has long interested me as much as Emily Dickinson, the poet."

Yet the author encountered much difficulty in gathering material for the biography because Miss Dickinson's relatives flatly refused to aid her.

"They wouldn't even let me see her library," Miss Taggard said. "I was particularly eager to discover who her favorite authors were, and to find out where she had marked her copy of Emerson's "Essays." But I had to get my information elsewhere. Her relatives obviously believe they still own all that remains of Emily Dickinson."

In addition to the biography, Miss Taggard is the author of six books.

Visitor Cites Government's 'New Outlook'

Leader of Australian School Sees Stress on Social Work.

IN two short years, the United States Government has experienced a complete change of face from the foreigner's viewpoint. Its physical and spiritual outlook is brighter, its course more comprehensive and direct. One reason is its shift to emphasis on social welfare.

This observation was made by Miss Aileen Fitzpatrick, director of the School of Social Work at Sidney, Australia, who, with 16 of her graduate students, now making a tour of America, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Mary A. Lindsley at the Dodge Hotel yesterday.

The 17 Australian women, each representing a different phase of the social service work, are making a systematic survey of programs being carried on in cities throughout Canada and the United States.

Here's Method To Make Butter In Your Home

By Dorothea Duncan.

HERE IS A BIT of news for the homemaker apropos the high cost of butter. Guy Elliott Mitchell, of the U. S. Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, says: "Here is an idea that ought to be worth something to the housewife, especially with butter at 45 or 50 cents a pound, and going up. Put one-half pound of butter in a fruit jar and melt slowly. As soon as melted, add an approximately equal amount of whole sweet milk; screw on the cap and shake mixture for three minutes. When it cools you will have one pound of good butter. If too fresh, add salt in the making."

Questions submitted by readers follow:

Answer—Calves' liver may be rolled in flour which has been mixed with a little salt and pepper, then placed in a hot frying pan in which bacon drippings or butter has been melted. Have just enough of the fat to brown the liver nicely and to keep it from burning. Brown the liver quickly on each side and immediately turn the heat low. Cover the pan so that the steam formed will cook the liver and keep it moist and tender. Cook until tender and serve at once.

Mousse Formula Given.

Answer—A mousse is made of whipped cream, sweetened, flavored, packed and frozen without stirring. Gelatin is often used to give body to a mousse. In that case it is sometimes spoken of as a frozen souffle. Chocolate, coffee, maple and fruit flavors of various kinds are used.

Caramel Sauce.

Question—Will you please print a recipe for caramel sauce?

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon cold water
1 1-3 cups hot water
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Place the sugar and cold water in a pan and stir until the resulting sirup is a clear brown, but not so dark as caramel; then add the hot water and stir until the whole is well blended. Add the cornstarch mixed with a little cold water and boil for five minutes. Continue cooking over hot water for 15 minutes, stirring all the time. Beat in butter and vanilla.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to answer your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Home Key to Happiness, Carmela Ponselle Says

MISS CARMELA PONSELLE, opera star, who believes in big families, also advocates freedom for women.

Believes in Large Families but Thinks Il Duce's Plan Is Wrong.

A HUSBAND, a home and a big family make the average woman happier than anything else, is the belief of Carmela Ponselle, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who is appearing on the vaudeville stage here this week.

"But that doesn't mean I'm in sympathy with Mussolini's gesture to force every woman, despite her talent and wishes, to stay at home," she said yesterday in her dressing room at the theater.

"He is wrong in supposing women are useful for nothing except housework and rearing families, and, despite reports from Italy, I am not convinced women over there are happy under the new regime."

Eventual Revolt Predicted.

Miss Ponselle believes women in both Italy and Germany will eventually revolt against being kept in the kitchen and the nursery.

"But if they don't, we needn't be afraid American women will follow them back to the exclusively domestic life," she said. "Women here have had freedom long enough to appreciate what it means to their mental development."

Miss Ponselle attributes these opinions to the fact she was born in this country.

"So why shouldn't I be American in my attitudes, even though I am Italian?" she asked, her dark eyes flashing.

"But then," she added, a soft smile curving her full lips, "I also believe in big families. That's the Italian influence, I guess."

Next to rearing children and presiding over a well-managed home, she believes the best thing for a woman is a career and philanthropic work. "In my own case, my work is my life," she said, "and welfare pursuits my recreation."

Won't Give Up Career.

She said she found the latter so satisfying and interesting she had often considered giving up her career in order to devote her entire time to benevolent projects.

"But now I know I'll probably never give up my career," she said. "It is so much a part of me I can't imagine what my life would be without it. No, I'll never give up my career—not even if I marry again." (Her first marriage to Dr. Henry Giamarino ended in divorce.)

So far she has never met "the right man," she said, although she has been reported engaged frequently. A year ago there were numerous rumors she would marry Francis X. Bushman, movie hero of a past generation.

"There was nothing at all to that report," Miss Ponselle said, "even though Mr. Bushman is one of the most attractive men I have ever met. To tell you the truth, my life has been so full I've hardly had time to fall in love."

But she does find time for some of the domestic pursuits in which she is interested and prides herself on being a better-than-average housekeeper, gardener, and interior decorator.

Likes Dress Designing.

"I like dress designing, too," she said. "Every costume I have I planned myself. That one (she pointed to a white moire gown with a pleated drop-shoulder bertha, and a wide pleated band around the hemline) is one of my favorites. The black sequin hanging next to it is the one I shall wear in my next performance. In fact, I have a different dress for every show."

Did she enjoy appearing in the four-a-day after having been with the Metropolitan Opera Company?

"Well, four performances a day is hard, any way you look at it," she admitted. "But I don't mind. You know, Rosa and I started on the vaudeville stage. Besides, the money I'll make here will go toward educating two of my nephews."

How To KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE is a nursery rhyme that runs as follows:

"Little Miss Muffet sat on a tuffett
Eating her curds and whey
And she had influenza next day."

In yesteday's article we discussed a few of the simple known facts about bacteria, and we must now consider some of the organisms that cause disease.

One of the most dangerous of the bacteria groups is known as the streptococcus. These are little spheres that exist in long or short chains. They are particularly virulent and are responsible for many types of endocarditis (inflammation of the lining of the heart).

Tuberculosis is caused by a bacillus and reaps a harvest of 160,000 deaths in the United States each year.

When bacterial disease attacks the individual a battle is on between body resistance and the growing organisms. We could stand the presence of a huge number of bacteria were it not for the fact that most of them produce a toxin or poison that acts as a destroyer of important cells and hence organs of the body.

The poison produced by poliomyelitis attacks nerves and causes paralysis. Diphtheria and tetanus (lockjaw) bacilli produce a poison that also affects the nervous system, paralyzing certain nerves and sometimes causing death. Diphtheria bacilli usually lodge somewhere in the nasal passages, on the back of the throat, or on the tonsils.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Life just seems to have it in for me. I no sooner outlive one great trouble than I find myself right in the middle of another one, worse than the one that has gone before.

• • • •

I lost my father when I was 17 and had to stop school and go to work to help my mother keep a roof over our heads. At 21, I married and my mother came to live with us. When I was 25 my husband died, leaving me with a 3-year-old daughter. I went to work again, with mother taking care of the baby and me providing the income.

• • • •

I am 30 now; my daughter is 8 and my mother is 56. I remarried a year ago, to a very fine man. My mother lives with us, but she can't get along with my husband. Whenever my husband I have a little difference of opinion, as all married couples are bound to have from time to time, mother never lets matters drop. She keeps referring to my husband's disagreeable disposition, his bossiness, his lack of consideration for me, and so on. I am deeply in love with him and he is devoted to me and to my little girl.

• • • •

IF we try to get the child to go somewhere with us, she bursts into tears and says she can't leave grandma; that if she does, grandma will go away and won't be there when she comes back. I don't know where she got that idea, unless her grandmother has talked to her behind our back.

• • • •

I have kept on with the work I've been doing ever since my first husband died. I make a good salary, and give my mother a generous allowance every week. In turn, she runs the house and looks after my daughter. She was never in favor of my marrying again, and I sometimes think she is trying to separate me from my husband. He told me a week ago I had to choose between my mother and him pretty soon, because if she doesn't leave, he will have to.

What do you think I should do? TORMENTED.

DEAR TORMENTED: The law of man and nature demands that conjugal loyalty take precedence over filial devotion, however much that decree may seem to outrage traditional sentiment. You can only deal fairly with your husband by eliminating your mother from the family circle since she is, apparently, so aggressively inimical to him.

• • • •

YOU have dealt fairly with your mother when you have shown her respect and consideration, and, if she is without means of support, protected her from want. You will have dealt fairly with your daughter when you have removed her from the pernicious influence of an emotional, possessive, prejudiced and neurotic grandmother.

• • • •

Quite obviously, your daughter is suffering with a neurosis common to children who live in a troubled household. Such children are the victims of a constant unreasoning fear of they-know-not-what. They develop a frenzied dependence on some person, whom they do not trust out of their sight. Social workers have encountered many pathetic cases of this kind among children of families whose fortunes have been reversed by the depression. It is not uncommon among children of divorce. Your daughter is too young to realize that the person in whom she has put her trust—her grandmother—is the real mischief maker.

• • • •

Your mother is probably suffering with a neurosis of another kind—the sense of inferiority, which comes with the conviction of having lost first place in the affections of one's only child. To compensate for that loss, she is striving to alienate her grandchild's affections from her parents and center them upon herself. That, too, is not uncommon. She probably reasons subconsciously, too, if you were to be alienated from your husband, you would turn once more to her for guidance and consolation.

• • • •

She is to be pitied, of course, but she must be dealt with firmly if three lives are not to come to grief—yours, your husband's and your child's.

Lose no time in transferring your mother and her effects to some other address than your own. If she is dependent upon you for support, she will have to submit to your terms in return for her regular allowance. If she isn't, all the more reason for her making a home of her own.

• • • •

For a few weeks or months after separating your child from her grandmother, it might be wise to handle her in accordance with the advice of a child psychiatrist. M. H.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

THERE are times when bringing up children seems a harassing job, entailing endless work and worry over possible hazards to life and limb. But spend a few moments recalling your own childhood and you will find comfort in realizing that there are quite a few things for the mother of today to be thankful for.

For one thing, corner candy stores don't sell chocolate coated marshmallows with a penny imbedded in one out of 100 or so. Remember them? Your mother forbade you to buy them, for she worried for fear you might swallow the penny, or break your teeth on it; and besides, it encouraged the gambling spirit. But the lure was too great, and every cent you could muster went into one of those candies in the hope of getting a penny to buy still another one!

Our Fourth of July may not be entirely devoid of accidents, but it is relatively so. Firecrackers, for the most part, are safe and sane, and the day does not hold the same fear for mothers that it did 20 years ago.

As for the actual care of the child, consider the simplicity of clothes compared with those of two generations ago. They are easier to make, and certainly less trouble to put on. And the modern baby keeps his mother awake far less at night because he is healthy and happy, and sleeps contentedly.

So, the next time that the children seem a care and a burden, reflect a moment on the advantages of our modern age, and be thankful that you're bringing up a family today, instead of a quarter century ago.

Suspect Denies Slaying of Two At Virginia Inn

Harry Sprouse, 33, Gives Self 'Benefit of Doubt,' Blonde Also Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 25.—Harry Sprouse, 33, questioned at State police headquarters today concerning the fatal stabbing of Otho W. and Emmet L. Hicks, at a Goochland County roadhouse early yesterday, said he "didn't know whether he did it or not."

The finding of two blood-stained butcher knives led Capt. H. B. Nicholas, superintendent of State police, and P. A. L. Smith, Commonwealth attorney of Goochland County, to the belief that more than one person was involved in the killing which climaxed a free-for-all brawl at Pine Inn, near Tuckahoe Creek.

Although more than 25 persons crowded the building at the time of the fight, no one could be found today who could explain how the row started or just what occurred. The Hicks brothers died en route to a local hospital and Sprouse was arrested later at his home here.

Hearing Set for Friday.

Smith said that Sprouse will be taken to Goochland County and given a preliminary hearing there on Friday. He has been held at Henrico Jail here since his arrest.

Also taken into custody as material witnesses were Joe Quinn, proprietor of the resort, and Pauline Holder, 19-year-old South Richmond girl, who was with Sprouse.

Still partially dazed, Sprouse was brought to State police headquarters today. He was cut about the face and had a badly discolored eye. He told officers that the fight started suddenly and the last he remembered was being pushed to the floor and kicked.

Gives Self Benefit of Doubt.

"I don't think I killed anybody, and I'm giving myself the benefit of the doubt," he said. Richmond police said that the man had been arrested here 28 times in recent years, mostly for violation of the liquor laws.

Police are endeavoring to locate others who were at the party, in hope that more light will be thrown on the deaths of the two men.

Miss Holder, a blonde, said that she went to the place with Sprouse early Saturday evening, but claimed she left at the first sign of trouble. She emphatically denied that she handed the knife to the man or aided him in any way.

When State Patrolmen Groth and Lohr arrived, the inn was almost deserted, but overturned tables and chairs indicated a terrific struggle had taken place.

Male Beauty Changes 'Back to Barrymore'

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 25.—The profile made famous by John Barrymore, screen actor, is coming back as the style for male beauty.

The gentlemen of more rugged countenance are giving way to the demand of producers; "We want Barrymores. We want matinee idols. We want classic profiles. Get us more Frederic Marches, more Warren Williams, John Boleses, Warner Baxters."

Because of this marked change in the trend of beauty among men, regularity of physiognomy is to be regarded of prime importance to a male star and leading man. However, it's going to be even more difficult for the screen stars, because producers say the handsome boys will be required to act in addition to revealing perfection in appearance.

Paving Notice Laxity Draws Court Rebuke

Commissioners Criticized Although Upheld in Taxpayer's Appeal.

Although upholding the lower court decision, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals yesterday rebuked the District Commissioners for failing to notify personally property owners when the latter are supposed to bear the cost of improvements such as street or alley paving.

The decision was handed down in a case involving Mrs. Marie C. Carusi, widow of Charles P. Carusi, former president of the District of Columbia Board of Education. She had appealed from a decision of the District Supreme Court, which upheld the right of the Commissioners to levy on a $480 paving assessment.

Mrs. Carusi, through Godfrey L. Munter, attorney, argued that she had not been given sufficient notice of assessment and that its effect was discriminatory.

Technical Compliance Admitted.

In the majority opinion sustaining the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals declared that the notice of assessment given by the Commissioners "comes very near to the line" but "technically complies with the requirements of the statute." The opinion held further that there was no proof that anything tended "to make the assessments unequal or unfair" despite the alleged insufficiency of the notice.

The opinion, however, added:

"In sustaining it, however, we feel justified in issuing a word of caution to the Commissioners in issuing notices of this kind in the future. The notices should be so printed, and the properties so individualized, as to readily attract the attention of the owners. Better still, though not required by the statute, in addition to the statutory notice, would be the service of personal notice of the owners of the property along which it is proposed to improve or pave the streets or alleys."

Hitz Calls It Travesty.

In a dissenting opinion, Associate Justice William Hitz held the notice given was "a mere travesty on justice, theoretically complying with the letter of the statute, but wholly disregarding its spirit."

"The property in question had stood on the tax records in the same name and ownership for many years, and by a slight effort actual notice could have been brought home to the owner," he said. "If the Commissioners disregard their obvious opportunities to give actual notice, and rely wholly on the statute, they should be held to a reasonable and effective compliance therewith, and not to a merely colorable and technical compliance by the publication of a puzzle."

Immediately after the court's decision, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman announced he would discuss with the Commissioners possible changes in present methods of notification.

The corporation counsel held that he did not believe any change in the present law was necessary, but that deficiencies in the method of notification might be remedied through broader newspaper advertisements.

Nice Flays 'Waste' Of Ritchie Reign In Urging Probe

Blames Big Deficit On His Predecessor

And Claims That He Is Being Made Victim of Unjust Criticism.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Feb. 25.—Asserting that he wanted to acquaint the public first hand with the financial condition of the State, and that he did not propose to have saddled on his shoulders responsibility resulting from "inefficiency and mismanagement of previous administrations," Gov. Harry W. Nice tonight addressed the people of Maryland in a radio address, broadcast from Baltimore. He spoke for 45 minutes.

Gov. Nice scored the administration of leading departments of the State government during the administration of his predecessor in office (Gov. Albert C. Ritchie), to the end that he "inherited" a $3,800,000 deficit which he charged was concealed from the public during the pre-election campaign last fall. He said that he is being made victim of an unjustifiable campaign of criticism, and facing keen opposition from a Democratic Legislature to his plan for an investigation of all State departments.

Calls on People for Aid.

This proposed inquiry was one of the campaign slogans of Gov. Nice and his investigation bill is now on file before the Assembly. In his talk tonight he explained the provisions of the measure, which he said he regarded as an honest discharge of his duty, and called on the people to give expression of their views on the proposal, by contacting their representatives in the Assembly.

"When the administration of Maryland's affairs was turned over to me January 9 the State was in financial distress," Gov. Nice said. "It was for the moment financially affected to the point of danger. In a word, it was chaotic, disorganized and financially ill. I do not propose to be charged now or hereafter with the responsibility of this altogether inexcusable condition of affairs.

"It is plainly to be seen that a very deliberate, unjustifiable and patently partisan plan or scheme of destructive criticism is being inaugurated for the silly, concealed purpose of saddling upon my shoulders this responsibility for the inefficiency and mismanagement of previous administrations."

Refuses to Absorb Deficit.

After speaking of the time and labor given in the short period he has been at the helm of affairs, the Governor referred to the fact that he had presented a balanced budget for the next biennium, but disclaimed that it was his function to absorb a $3,800,000 deficit which he inherited. To do so, the Governor said, "would have wrecked the financial structure of Maryland during the budgetary years 1936 and 1937."

Turning to the preelection campaign, Gov. Nice declared:

"This serious condition in the State's affairs was, with deliberation, care and artifice, disguised and concealed. The financial condition was falsely represented as one of unique strength and elegance. The people were willfully deceived by both suppression and misrepresentation of the truth. No one dreamed of the real and true conditions, of the tremendous deficit in the general treasury, running into millions."

Gov. Nice then laid responsibility for this concealment at the door of "leaders of the vicious political machine of the preceding administration."

Continuing, he said, "They concealed the general wreckage, and urgently advocated the continuation in power of the administration which had brought it about. That administration, and those dominating, lauding and supporting it, either knew that the State was in danger or they did not know it. On either horn of the dilemma, they are equally culpable. If they knew it, and it seems impossible and incredible that they did not know it, they are guilty of unpardonable perfidy in falsely concealing it from the people and willfully misleading the people about it."

"If they did not know it, then, charged as they were with the fullest responsibility and obligation to know it, they were guilty of gross neglect and default in not knowing it. Their fulsome, nauseating flattery, their reviling, ridiculing and crushing of every voice raised in opposition to any act of the past administration made possible the present discovery of those administrations as prodigious imposters."

The Governor told the radio audience that the result of the last election made it impossible for the concealment and misrepresentation being continued, and said: "The election ended the suppression of truth, the imposture upon the people, and tore off the disguise of the imposters."

The Governor pointed out that even before the postelection revelations there were strong evidences that some State departments were failing in their duty. He charged that the treasury department "had poured thousands of dollars of public money into insolvent banks and trust companies, whose officers were officials in or politically connected with the State administration." Gov. Nice followed this up by saying that the State banking department "was subject to the scorn and contempt of the people." He attacked the State roads commission as a "palpable and notorious failure," and directed attention to complaints regarding other governmental departments.

"The people of the whole State were so aroused," Gov. Nice declared, that wherever he went during his campaign for the governorship, he "found an insistent demand for an investigation of those departments." While this demand was "everywhere outspoken and irresistible," the Governor said, "if the true conditions had not been concealed from the people, they would have sent forth the hot lava of their indignation against both the administration and those supporting it and responsible for the wrongs, in majorities as high as the Alleghanies of our Western Shore."

Touching upon the proposed investigation, Gov. Nice said: "A terrible public emergency impends, and yet there are those—some taking counsel only with political partisanship—some taking counsel with their fears of exposure—some fearing the responsibility of their own conduct—some callous and indifferent to the public good—who oppose and would prevent the one thing indispensable and supremely necessary to overcome the evil, to rescue the State and protect it hereafter—an investigation where there is wrong, what the wrong is, what has caused and is causing it, and how it shall be stopped and prevented."

Gov. Nice stressed the point that the promised and contemplated investigation is absolutely not partisan, political or personal, but that its single purpose is the great goal of public good.

Analyzing the provisions of the investigation bill, Gov. Nice said one of the pretended grounds of opposition is its expense. This, he said, would be small compared to the existing deficit of $3,800,000, and in consideration that it is designed solely as a future safeguard.

Gov. Nice closed his address with a fervent appeal to the public at large to express their views, yea or no, on the proposed inquiry, by communicating with the Senators and Delegates by whom they are represented, as well as other persons who exercise public leadership or influence.

While expressing the firm belief that the General Assembly desires to deal fairly with every proposal he has made, or many make, including the investigation bill, yet the Governor said he is equally convinced there is a concerted effort by those antagonistic for various reasons to defeat it, and at least two of those reasons may be listed as fear and partizanship.

Cab HoldupSuspect Returned for Trial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 25.—Hilton Grove, 29, one of three men arrested yesterday at Rockville, was returned here today to answer a charge of robbing William Byrd, local taxicab driver.

Grove, who served a term in the penitentiary for robbing the Keedysville, Md., Bank, 10 years ago, was acquitted last week of complicity in the robbing of a Sharpsburg, Md., store. Don Romanellie, alias Cerillo, recently released from jail when the grand jury failed to indict him for robbing a vending machine, and Ralph Riley, were the others arrested with Grove at Rockville.

Byrd said one of two men who engaged him to drive them about the city held him up and took his automobile. The machine figured in an accident at Middletown, but did not stop, later being seized at Rockville with the three occupants. The taxicab was identified as the one taken from Byrd.

Judges to Reveal Recount Division

Deadlock on Commissioner Now Near End.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 25.—Decision of the election deadlock for county commissioner from Annapolis, resulting from the last November election, now rests with judges of Anne Arundel County Circuit Court. The recount of ballots in 13 out of 36 precincts, ordered by court, has been completed.

The contestants in the case are T. Roland Brown, Republican, and John J. Levay, each of whom received 7,512 votes on the official returns. The rival candidates entered into a mutual action to obtain a recount, claiming certain irregularities and discrepancies in designated precincts.

Testimony first was taken before Police Justice Thomas G. Basil, who also supervised the recount. As a result of this recanvass, a total of 818 ballots were challenged, and these will be passed upon by court. Magistrate Basil's official report will be ready for presentation in a day or two. The court fixed March 4 as the time limit.

Loudoun County Board Weighs 10-Cent Increase in Tax Rate

Estimated Boost in Expenditures for Year Beginning June 30 May Force General Levy to 90 Cents Per $100 Assessed Valuation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 25.—A proposed increase of 10 cents in the Loudoun County tax rate for the coming fiscal year was considered by the Board of Supervisors, meeting today in Leesburg. This would raise the rate from 80 cents, last year's levy, to 90 cents on the $100 assessed valuation of property.

The higher rate was deemed necessary after Clerk E. O. Russell read to the board estimated expenditures for the coming year. These, he stated, will include $50,000 for the general county fund; an appropriation of $82,500 for the schools and an estimated deficit of $17,500 for this year, making a total of $150,000 needed to balance the budget for the year, beginning June 30, 1935. The estimated assessment for the year will amount to $14,500,000.

Mrs. Ruth W. Thompson, of Manassas, area relief director, asked an appropriation toward the rent of an office and warehouse at Manassas, the area relief center. The board voted to grant $12.50 a month for three months, provided the amount is deducted from the local relief office rent.

The board today refused to sign an application blank for a rehabilitation fund of $13,317.49 for March, which Mrs. Thompson presented. Members declared they did not know how the money is being disbursed in the county and until they receive specific information would not ask the additional fund.

The board passed a resolution urging the highway commission to take such steps to insure the early improvement of Route 234, which would benefit citizens of Loudoun, Prince William and Fairfax Counties.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to Highway Commissioner Shirley and Wade C. Massie, of Washington, Va.

ABC in Virginia Explains Its Rules

Sales Banned on Holidays of Religious Nature.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today made it known that in its war on bootleggers it is keeping its stores open on holidays other than those of religious and semireligious nature.

The announcement was made as the result of numerous inquiries as to why the stores were open on Washington's Birthday, while the offices of other Government agencies were closed.

The law prohibits operation on Sundays and election days, but leaves to the ABC board the question of closing on other days.

Four Candidates In Baltimore Race

Mayor Jackson announced his candidacy for renomination last night. He suggested reduction of the budget and the municipal tax rate.

W. C. Howard Named Federal Court Clerk

Special Dispatch to The Post.

5,000-Gallon Bootleg Flow Ended in North Carolina Raids

8 Men, 2 Horses and Wagon Part of 'Catch' Made by Revenue Agents in East Lake Section; 15 Stills Taken; 75,000 Gallons of Mash Destroyed.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 25.—Cutting a wide swath through the heart of the East Lake section of North Carolina, center of a gigantic illegal whisky distilling industry, Norfolk internal revenue agents returned to the city today after a seven-day drive that is described as having almost completely paralyzed the bootlegging industry in eastern Carolina.

Working night and day from headquarters abroad the Coast Guard cutter that forced its way into the heart of the famous "hidden city" section, the raiding agents totaled their "bag" today as follows:

Fifteen stills.

Seventy-five thousand gallons of mash.

Eight hundred gallons of whiskey.

Eight men.

Two horses.

One wagon.

The output of the 15 stills is estimated at more than 5,000 gallons of whiskey a day.

While the raiding squad centered its attack on the East Lake area, raiding parties ranged outward for scores of miles to capture large distilleries in Camden, Pasquotank and Perquimins counties.

The value of distilling equipment destroyed was estimated at approximately $30,000 in actual outlay.

Three of the stills captured were of 1,000 gallons capacity, capable of turning out more than 500 gallons of whisky each daily.

The 75,000 gallons of mash destroyed is valued at an actual figure of $7,500—10 cents a gallon—and a potential figure of many times this amount due to the 7,500 gallons of bootleg whiskey it would have produced.

The eight men arrested, all of them turned over to Federal authorities at Elizabeth City, gave their names as James Dall, Wilbur Pothasis, Mitchell Hymphlett, Ernest Cole, Luther Sutton, Harvey Janes, Winslow White and Herbert Felton.

Roosevelt Bars Oysters Study At $500,000

Bland Measure Is Vetoed; President Sees No Success Assured.

President Roosevelt yesterday sent his first veto message to the present Congress, returning without approval a bill authorizing an appropriation of $500,000 for an investigation into and eradication of pests injurious to oysters, clams and scallops in waters of the Atlantic and Gulf States.

The bill was sponsored by Representative Schuyler O. Bland (Democrat), Virginia.

"I am not satisfied that this very large appropriation would accomplish the result hoped for," the President said in rejecting the bill. "I can not get assurance of the probability of permanent eradication or control of these marine pests. Science has not yet discovered the answer.

"There is, on the other hand, every reason for further investigation and experimentation with the hope that a practical answer may be found. Such work can be carried on by the Bureau of Fisheries under existing authority."

The vetoed bill authorized the Secretary of Commerce to spend up to $500,000 to conduct investigations and experiments for the determination of the best methods to control leech, starfish, borer and other pests injurious to shellfish in the Atlantic and Gulf States, and to take immediate steps to control and eradicate the pests under such regulations as may be deemed necessary.

Wouldn't Beg

New Yorker, Starving, Is Found in Maryland.

Belair, Md., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—A man too proud to beg was found unconscious of starvation on the Belair-Conowingo road today.

He is Louince Howard, 25, a native of Albany, N. Y. He hadn't eaten for five days, he reported after being revived in the office of Dr. Armfield Van Bibber, in Belair.

Howard said he had walked around the county looking for work and didn't want to beg for food or money. Belair police are permitting him to use the station as a home for several days until he is rested and built up.

Maryland Board Of Parole to Get 26 Applications

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 25.—Gaylord Lee Clark, parole commissioner, has 26 applications for parole to be heard on Wednesday.

One applicant is Clarence Naill, serving a six-year sentence for second-degree murder resulting from striking a man with his fist in a fight which grew out of a baseball game.

Naill, it was said, struck Herbert Duvall, of Unionville, at a ball game in Mount Airy. Duvall died instantly of a fractured skull. Naill was convicted in Frederick and sent to the Maryland Penitentiary in 1932.

Clyde C. Koons, a western Maryland automobile dealer, who has served out his parole period on an embezzlement charge after being released from the Maryland House of Correction, has applied for restoration of his franchise. The case will be heard Wednesday.

The National Park Service officials yesterday named H. E. Weatherwax, Richmond, Va., as one of the five new district supervisors of emergency work camps along the eastern seaboard, according to the Associated Press.

The area to be under Weatherwax's supervision will include West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Maryland and Delaware.

New Appeal In Coblentz Case Looms

State Indicates Fight on Ruling Expected Monday.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 25.—The case of Emory L. Coblentz, former Frederick County State Senator and banker, charged with bank law infractions, appeared today to be headed toward the State Court of Appeals for a third time.

Judge George A. Solter, at preliminary proceedings before him here, indicated he would dismiss the Howard County charge against Coblentz in a ruling expected next Monday.

The State in turn indicated it would appeal from the expected ruling and thus send the case back to the appellate court. The last time this court ruled in the case it reversed an order of Judges Solter and Eli Frank dismissing the charge.

Fraud Charge Pending.

The ground upon which Judge Solter indicated he would again throw out the Howard County charge was a defense plea that the basis of the charge has been rejected in other court jurisdictions and Coblentz should not be tried on it again. An amended plea to this effect is to be submitted by Leo Weinberg, of Frederick, a defense attorney.

The pending charge against Coblentz is that of fraudulent corporate representations in connection with the affairs of the Central Trust Co., which he headed, and its absorption of an Ellicott City bank. It originally was tried in another county. A conviction on a count of accepting deposits when the bank was insolvent was reversed by the Court of Appeals.

Rehearing Follows Dismissal.

The case then was transferred to Baltimore City, and Judges Solter and Frank dismissed it on a defense demurrer to the indictment, only to have it sent back by the Court of Appeals for rehearing.

Judge Solter indicated that the process by which he would again dismiss the charge would be in overruling a demurrer filed by the State to the amended defense plea of res adjudicata.

Record Intake Exceeds Star's Fondest Dream

'Romeo and Juliet' Is Play; Big Business Here, Too; About the Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

In 12 weeks of "Romeo and Juliet," Katharine Cornell has grossed a quarter of a million dollars, the actress-manager made known Saturday night when she made her final appearance this season in the Shakespeare tragedy in the Martin Beck Theater, New York City.

Her receipts for the final week were in excess of $25,300. Much comment, including a considerable amount by this column, was inspired by Miss Cornell's statement last fall, when she began her season, that, regardless of the boxoffice returns, she must face a deficit in view of the limited number of weeks scheduled for the play. Miss Cornell's forebodings seem to have fallen within that annoying category of worries based on the gratuitous anticipation of things that never happen.

As her New York run was extended three times and drew a series of capacity houses beyond all expectations, the first lady of the American theater not only has paid off the heavy initial costs of production—the production was done twice, you will recall—and the huge weekly expenses, referred to in the quaint patois of show business as "the nut," but will show a profit on the undertaking.

So, you see, there can be no argument about it. The theater is dead!

The utter ridiculousness of the tenacious charge that the traditional theater is about to become extinct can be brought closer home than Miss Cornell's Broadway affluence.

The D'Oyly Carte Opera Co., at the National Theater last week, played to a gross of more than $25,000, thus perpetuating a record of patronage of the legitimate theater in the National Capital that amassed a total intake creeping stealthily up toward the $100,000 mark in four consecutive weeks.

The D'Oyly Carte Company probably played to more people in Washington than in any other city in the country, outside of New York. While the Boston receipts exceeded those of Washington, the Savoy operas were put on in the Hub at a $3.30 scale of prices, as opposed to $2.75 here. At the Boston scale, Washington would have shown the Savoyards some real money—not that 25 Gs is spinach!

That Stage Show.

While the remarkably trained animals in "Sequoia," the screen feature, are attracting major attention at Loew's Fox this week, there are items of interest concerning some of the participants in the stage portion of the goings-on that will bear with a bit of telling.

Frank Parker, the radio songster headlining the vaudeville bill, was formerly a tap dancer. When he was picking them up and laying them down in the 1927 "Greenwich Village Follies," doing a single, one of the principals fell victim to laryngitis, that bane of all singers, and Frank, who knew all of the songs by heart, stepped in in the emergency and knocked the customers for the proverbial loop of high Cs. He has been canarying ever since, in such productions as "No, No, Nanette," "No Other Girl" and the like.

Incidentally, he wears a jade hunchback as a good-luck watch charm, just in case he might be taken ill sometime with an ambitious hoofer on the bill.

Snowflake, the Pooch Paradox.

The "paradox" dog in Harry Howard's insane act has been trained to do exactly the opposite of everything he is told to do. It might be the President and the Senate you're watching! His name is Snowflake—for the incontrovertibly appropriate reason that he is as black as charcoal. Snowflake is 16 years old and since the age of 4 has been insured for $25,000. His pappy, also named Snowflake, lived to be 21. A simple process of arithmetic will disclose that Snowflake 2d, still has 5 years ahead of him in which to add to his master's seeming lunacy.

And, strange as it may seem, that Honey Family of acrobats, gymnasts and tumblers, who open the bill really are all one family. The father owned one of the most famous circuses—or is it circi?—that ever toured the Antipodes, the St. Leon-Honey Circus. This tent show boasted an unbroken history of more than a century. The present act has been in existence since 1925 and was first brought to this country in 1927.

Began At Seven.

The youngest boy, Tom Honey, is 17 and was actively taking a part in the family's public gymnasticism, when he was seven.

Every member of the troupe—six of them, if I counted correctly—practically has grown up with the act. Mrs. Honey was a St. Leon and a niece, Ida St. Leon, was the bareback rider in "Polly of the Circus."

The current act is a little unusual in that it utilizes the girls of the family as stander-unders for their brothers, who land heavily on their shoulders from all distances and heights. The gals can take it!

If one were to set down an afterthought or two concerning the Fox's current vaudeville show they would be that Frank Parker might advantageously abandon his attempted smart-cracking between songs and Harry Howard send certain intervals of his verbal and physical roughhousing to the cleaners. Y'wekkum.

Enough of This Guy!

Through Paramount News exclusively, that organization announces with obvious pride, Bruno Richard Hauptmann takes his place as the first convicted murderer in the history of the country who has been able to speak to, and be seen by, the American public. Paramount further announces that it "regards its presentation of Hauptmann strictly as a service to theatergoers.

"Leaning against the bars of his cell," the statement continues, "Hauptmann looks and talks directly into the Paramount camera, the first and only newsreel ever to photograph a convict in Hauptmann's category after the sentence of death has been imposed."

Now isn't that just ducky! What a spiritual boon, indeed, it will be to the United States and the rest of the world to hear Bruno talk through the bars of his cell. Ugh!

From Romaine Callender, that valiant old wheel horse of the National Theater Players, presided over every spring and early summer by Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National, comes the following, under date of February 23: "We play our 100th performance of 'Post Road,' Tuesday, February 26. We have moved to the Ambassador Theater. Lucille Watson is starred and Percy Kilbride, Edward Fielding and myself are now featured in the billing outside the theater."

All of which indicates that Mr. Callender is as much appreciated on Broadway as he is on E street—not an inexplicable circumstance to those who know him and his work.

Where Credit Is Due.

Having scarcely recovered from the hurly-burly of one of the most trying and most exhausting sessions of filling seat orders in the history of the theater, the box-office staff of the National Theater contemplates the engagement of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company as not all lost motion on their part, by reason of the following note of appreciation from at least one satisfied patron, Mrs. Thomas M. Spaulding, 1302 Eighteenth street northwest:

"Gentlemen: I wish to express my thanks for the very careful and intelligent manner in which you filled my order for Gilbert and Sullivan tickets. I asked for four pairs of tickets and gave you discretion to choose which night we should see 'The Gondoliers.' You sent me exactly the seats I like best for all performances and I am most grateful to you."

That is what our old friend, Hobart Bosworth, would call the box-office man's round of applause and brought cheer to the hearts of Russell Thomas and Percy Booth—not to mention old Panjandrum Cochran himself—after their struggle (and it WAS a struggle) to meet the demands of more than $20,000 worth of advance mail orders for seats, in addition to a box-office sale which, in itself, was enough to drive any box-office staff cuckoo!

Well, well, well! From 'way over in London, where the Dorchester Hotel, Park Lane, W. I., is showing the way to other West End night spots, comes a handsome brochure from Betty Jane Cooper and the Lathrop Brothers, "America's Dance Fashionists," who have more than once won the plaudits of Washington audiences. Betty Jane and the two Lathrops are the featured act in a pretentious floor show assembled by Francis Towle, managing director. There are 13 turns altogether and then dancing to Jack Jackson's Band. Mr. Towle evidently knows a headline act when he sees one.

That "Dorchester" name sort of intrigues me, too. There is an apartment house by that name at the corner of Eighty-fifth and Riverside Drive, in New York—but we won't go into that. Not again this year, anyway.

Dots and Dashes.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes was an interested spectator at the showing of "Sequoia" at Loew's Fox Theater last night . . . Those big trees come under his jurisdiction and he probably wanted to see how they photographed . . . Or maybe he just likes a good picture . . . Col. Orangelo Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace, is temporarily—one hopes—laid low by a heavy chest cold, or a slight attack of la belle grippe, whichever you prefer, if either . . . Ditto, Assistant House Manager George Peters, of Loew's Fox . . . And while we are at it, the California delegation in Congress will attend the screening of "Sequoia" tonight . . . Led by Representative John Steven McGroarty, of the Twelfth District, in which most of the picture was filmed . . . And the Fox copped second prize in the national competition for the best selling-campaign devoted to "Transatlantic Merry-Go Round" . . . The notice of this honor and a check for $75 was received Saturday night . . . And Lou Brown, in charge of advertising and publicity, is grinning from 'ere to 'ere . . . The Little Lamb's Club of St. Agnes Church will present "The Comic Supplement," a three-act comedy by Wilbur Braun, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week in St. Agnes Hall, 46 Q street northwest, at 8:30 p. m. . . . That "Petticoat Fever," in which Dennis King was to have played here either this week or next, is not closing, as reported in some quarters . . . Opens in New York next Monday, March 4 . . . Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the National ran over to Baltimore last Thursday to see "Hollywood Holiday," the new comedy, costarring Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon . . . Not yet as good as it will be when it reaches the Capital in about a month . . . Kathryn Givney, a favorite National Theater Player, is prominent—and excellent—in the supporting cast . . . Kate is a twin by birthdate, but not year, of this column's . . . Since we both are Scorpios, what I know about her!

I may be wrong, but it seems to me that the guillotine scenes in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," the swell film currently starring Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon on the RKO-Keith screen, are not so thrillingly effective as practically the same thing was made a decade ago by Ernst Lubitsch in "Passion" . . . Which was, of course, the story of Du Barry . . . Or perhaps it was merely that Pola Negri's terrorized cries for her Armand made them seem more tremendously moving than they really were . . . If possible . . . Merle Oberon, by the way, is not English, but an American who had to go to England to earn the recognition she thought she deserved—and did . . . Was born, so I am told, in Richmond . . . With the family name of O'Brien, or something of the sort . . . Or is this all cold turkey? . . . Anyway, Edward Knoblock had to do the same thing to make them like "Kismet" in this country . . . No American manager would touch it until it had scored in London . . . Then it became one of the greatest successes on this side that Otis Skinner ever had . . . And made Rita Jolivet, as an actress and later film star . . . Not that the two are incompatible! . . . Fred Walton wires me from New York to know if "The Drunkard" has been seen here yet . . . What do you think? . . . That's what I told him.

Work-for-Idle-Hands Note.

What, no play at the National tonight? And no fisticuffing at the Auditorium?

Well, how's about a couple of fast chukkers of crokinole, or something?

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—Frank Melville, jr., 74, chairman of the board of the Melville Shoe Corporation, died today at his home after an illness of about two months.

His corporation operates the John Ward and Thom McAn chain shoe stores, said to be the largest retail shoe organization in the world.

Practice Perfects Pirouetting

Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, who have been public favorites ever since they appeared together in the "Carioca" in "Flying Down to Rio," don loose-fitting practice clothes to perfect their new dances for "Roberta," with a shirt-sleeved orchestra playing for them on the set. It is reported that they have an unusual terpsichorean interpretation of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" that will be revealed for the first time when the new Irene Dunne vehicle comes to a local screen in the near future.

Dorothy Sands Offers a Solo Study of Stars

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"OUR STAGE AND STARS." T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau presents Dorothy Sands in a program of dramatic readings from selected American plays. At the National Theater. Reviewed Sunday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

1. Post-Revolutionary Theater—1787.
2. The Frontier Theater—1820.
3. The Theater of the Gold Rush and Mining Camps—1860.
4. The Romantic Seventies—1870.
5. At Tony Pastor's—1880.
6. Realism in the Twentieth Century—1909.
7. The Movies.

Playwrights and players of the American theater passed briefly in review last evening at the National Theater, as Dorothy Sands re-created scenes from imperishable dramatic works.

Starting with the first American comedy, Royall Tyler's "The Contrast," produced in 1787, Miss Sands offered six selections representing as many salient periods in theatrical history. Before enacting the particular scene, Miss Sands spoke briefly on the play, the players and the period.

In her selections from M. G. Lewes' melodrama, "Adelgitha, or the Fruits of a Single Error," Miss Sands depicted three characters—the hero, heroine and villain with true "gay Nineties" posturing and flowery excesses.

Next was the representation of Lotta Crabtree, as the marchioness, in John Brougham's "Little Nell and the Marchioness," dramatized for the star from "The Old Curiosity Shop."

The second part of the program opened with a representation of Ethel Barrymore's delineation of Madame Trentoni in "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines." While the play is of the vintage of 1901, Miss Sands included the work because of Clyde Fitch's admirable representation of the 70's and in tribute to the Drew-Barrymore "dynasty."

Perhaps Miss Sands' outstanding accomplishment of the evening was her representation of Lillian Russell, "queen of musical comedy" for more than 20 years. She sang several sentimental ballads of the period.

Last of the strictly "legitimate" theater sketches was devoted to bringing back Francis Starr's stellar debut, in 1909, in the Belasco production of Eugene Walter's somewhat bitter and stark "The Easiest Way."

While playing the dramatic sketches "straight," Miss Sands went mildly satirical when she discussed the motion picture.

To expound the subtitle, "Vampires—Now and Then," she did the traditional feminine spy scene (where she gets the important papers, you know) after the manner of Greta Garbo, Theda Bara and Mae West. The Bara "take-off" was "silent."

Gayety

"BABY VAMPS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 27 scenes, with Charlie Schultz, Fred Bishop, Billy Wallace, Nate Busby, Billy Lee, Frank Scannell, Joan Collette, Mary Weldon, Tangara, Charby Bonneau, Maxine DeShone and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Fiaig; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

"Baby Vamps," enlivened by a quick succession of fast-moving comedy sketches and colorfully staged dance routines,, is a highly diverting and entirely satisfactory burlesque offering.

Normally, Billy (Scratch) Wallace would take the ace position among the comics on a burlesque line-up, but this week that honor must be accorded Nate Busby, a clever black-face artist, whose work is original, even though confirmed Gayety-goers will find the sketches not entirely unfamiliar. The famed dice game is the high spot of the program, which is thickly studded with skits of especial merit.

All this, however, does not mean that "Scratch" is less good than usual—for he still works with wim, wigor and witality, and his sketches flow along smoothly and swiftly.

No little credit for the superiority of the comedians' efforts should go to Charlie Schultz, one of burlesque's most capable and resourceful straight men. Assisting him are Fred Bishop, who also has one of the better tenor voices, Billy Lee and Frank Scannell.

Better singers have been heard on the Gayety stage and more tantalizing queens have been seen there, but no display artiste has combined voice and beauty so effectively as Maxine DeShone.

Turbulent Tangara adds her characteristic charms to the program in a measure that disputes somewhat Miss DeShone's claim to the title of headliner. Charby Bonneau, too, has what it takes to make an acceptable queen of the show. And, of course, one should not entirely forget Joan Collette.

The dancing Bryanettes execute some of the most colorful of Impresario Lake's creations. Especial note should be made of the "Heart Strings" number, wherein Tenor Bishop sings "Sweet Music," and the Slave Market scene, which opens the second act.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon; Mischa Elman, soloist; Hans Kindler, conductor. Program: Introductions to Acts I and IV of "Khovanschina" (Mussorgski); Symphonic poem, "Vltava" (Smetana); two Slavonic dances (Dvorak); Violin Concerto in D major (Chaikovski).

With the warm amber of his tone as translucent as ever and his technique at the point of perfection, Misha Elman gave a performance of the Chaikovski concerto distinguished by brilliance and beauty. The ease with which he negotiated the difficulties of the work, such as the wide arpeggios and the passages in sixths in the first cadenza, elicited one's admiration, as did the consistently clear singing quality of his strings. Exacting as the concerto is, he played it with a mastery that seemed effortless.

The audience accorded him an ovation at the close of the first movement, noticeably delaying the progress of the reading, and recalled him eight times at the close. In the prolonged applause that eventually brought Mr. Elman out for the last bow, one felt the hope that he would play again; if so, expectation was disappointed. Yet no extra number could have enhanced the enjoyment already provided by his splendid performance.

Mr. Elman's eloquent tone was particularly lovely in the veiled melancholy of the canzonetta in the second movement, and its individuality was continually manifest elsewhere, standing out against the instrumental tutti like a thread of gold. Under Dr. Kindler's sympathetic baton, the orchestra gave supple and elastic support to the soloist, and the values of the entire concerto were finely disclosed.

Excellently shaded playing was also manifest in the selections from "Khovanschina," especially in the atmospheric prelude descriptive of dawn on the Moskva River; the tints were skillfully applied in tonal nuances. Smetana's symphonic poem was read with a vigor appropriate to its romantic character, and the dances by Dvorak were played with such irresistible spirit that the audience demanded a reptition of the one in C major.

Oysterman Urges More Rigid Laws

Would Increase Production, Says McCabe.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 25.—Strict enforcement of conservation measures as a means of bringing Maryland's oyster production to a higher level was advocated in a statement today by William W. McCabe, manager of the Oyster Planters Productive Association.

McCabe is a former mayor of Ocean City. His organization makes loans to oyster planters in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

"There is no finer oyster-producing grounds on the Atlantic Coast than the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries, provided we apply proper conservation methods to develop this vast oyster area," he stated. "Maryland can come back and dominate the oyster industry in a very short time provided the State will adopt a rigid conservation policy."

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

The Gossipel Truth

Hollywood, Feb. 24.

WILL ROGERS flew to Chicago last week to visit his wife and daughter, Mary. This is the first time Rogers ever left Hollywood while he was making a picture. However, Will wasn't needed for certain scenes.

For several days, he wanted to give daughter Mary some advice . . . Greta Garbo is at home ill in bed with a bad cold—if you want to know where Garbo is . . . Grace Moore will sing, among other numbers, arias from "La Boheme" in her next picture, for which Columbia is still seeking a title . . . Jack Durant and Molly O'Day expect the baby in July . . . Queenie Smith is taking a course in journalism at the University of Southern California . . . Nick Foran's new hot romance is the lovely Wendy Barrie.

• • • •

We didn't know so many people had bets on Azucar until after the race . . . Mervyn Leroy made the safest bet at the track. He bet a friend, before the race, that he'd have the winner of the handicap. He bought a $2 ticket on every horse entered and displayed only the winning ticket after the race was over . . . Lloyd Bacon is a director at Warners and every one believes he should have been given the assignment of directing "Midsummer Night's Dream." Then the billing could read: "A Midsummer Night's Dream, by Shakespeare and Bacon" . . . and advocates of both would be satisfied.

• • • •

KETTI GALLIAN won't be permitted by the censors to sing a ditty called "Women are Devils" in "Gaucho Moon." The censors do not want a woman called a devil; yet the name of the Dietrich flicker, passed by the censors, is "The Devil Is a Woman."

Rochelle Hudson is wearing a ring given to her by Buddy Eichilberger, a Pasadena society lad, despite the fact that Buddy's parents tried to separate them by sending Buddy on a world cruise. . . . The next Riskin-Capra flicker will be a movie version of the play, "Valley Forge," but it will not have any of the blank verse of the play. Maxine Doyle and Gordon Westcott are now singing "Love in Bloom" to each other and seem to mean it.

Howard Hawks puts a prisoner's ball and chain on Gene Fowler to keep him in a room and write the scenario of "Sutter's Gold" . . . Hugh Herbert, who can never remember his lines, is glad that he is finished with "Midsummer's Night Dream" and is now working in "Traveling Saleslady," for he can now go back to ad libbing.

Benny Rubin was great at the Warner Club party given at the Biltmore Bowl. Most of the Warner stars refused to take part in the entertainment and Rubin's opening remark was: "We haven't any of the big names or the stars from the studio but we have the talent." . . . However, the big stars provided the most merriment without knowing it, for several reels of blow-ups of stars were run off. This is a private picture, which, if ever released, would net a fortune, for it shows what your favorite actor and actress do when they blow up playing a scene. And what language some of those dainty and sweet actresses use . . . Over at Universal they almost made a great picture—but they caught it in time.

LEE TRACY played a newspaperman so often that he would really like to be one and he covered the Voltaire Apartment House fire for a local newspaper. This is an old habit with Lee from the days when he was Hildy Johnson in "The Front Page." Then when Lee was feeling gay he would call up newspapers to give them a scoop . . . Frances Drake and Henry Wilcoxon go for long walks just to have a friendly chat . . . Fred Waring and his crew have been offered $200,000 to appear in a musical to be made by Junior Laemmle . . . After looking them all over, Marion Davis has selected Pat O'Brien to be her leading man in "Page Miss Glory" . . . A new combination is Norman Foster and Mary Brian, and Bert Wheeler has been stepping about with Sally Haines . . . A certain studio is said to be expandnig—they have built more shelves on which to place pictures they can't release.

• • • •

Jack Doyle, the handsome pugilist, has an offer of $20,000 from Paramount to make a flicker and will do it if he can clear previous contract agreements . . . George White was getting ready to film the final sequence of his "Scandals." The assistant director told him he'd have to go to the back lot to film this particular sequence. "I won't go out there," said White. "Bring the set to this stage." And the stationary outdoor set was carted onto the sound stage . . . The next flicker being readied for Rudy Vallee is one in which he will play the role of Bing Crosby . . . New motto for the picture business: "Give the celluloid back to the collars." . . . Gene Fowler says he dislikes Hollywood parties because people go to them to be seen or obscene.

Work Is Delayed On Skyline Drive

High Bids Snag Progress of Southern Stretch.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Feb. 25.—As a result of the necessity of advertising for new bids for construction of the first 7-mile stretch, it is generally believed here that construction of the southern extension of the Skyline drive will be delayed indefinitely.

Bids for construction of the 7-mile stretch were requested some months ago, but it is understood on good authority that when they were opened February 7 that the Government considered the construction figures too high. At that time there were eight bidders, the lowest being the Keeley Construction Co., of West Virginia. Its bid was something over $500,000.

It was said that the bids were higher than for any 10-mile stretch and also higher than the Government engineer's estimate.

About 35 miles, or one-third of the entire drive, remains to be constructed. Work is progressing rapidly on the 30-mile northern extension of Front Royal.

Officers Seeking Delp in Carroll

Wanted for Slaying Chief of Police in Break.

By the Associated Press.

Galax, Va., Feb. 25.—County officers, aided by track dogs, combed the wild Fancy Gap area of Carroll County today in an effort to trap Howard Delp, wanted for the murder of Police Chief Posey Martin and the wounding of Frank Dotson, Galax policeman.

Delp, in jail for drunkenness, fatally stabbed Chief Martin and then slashed Dotson in a jail-break last Thursday.

Linked with the search are charges against Jim Brady who, Mayor B. D. Beamer said, admitted to officers that he fired three shots at Dowe Leonard when the latter tried to force his way into the Brady home Friday night. Leonard had shared the jail cell with Delp from which the latter escaped.

Friday he went to Brady's home, the latter said, and demanded to be admitted. Brady warned the man away, he said, and fired when Leonard persisted in his attempts to enter the house.

HARRIS.

THERE'S no sense kidding anybody. This column isn't being written in Biloxi, as it's supposed to be. There was the little matter of a late start from Washington and your correspondent is still en route to the Nats training camp. But somewhere along the way, at some whistle stop in Alabama, I'm going to dump a lot of verbiage into the lap of some railroad telegrapher and it will be a column about Biloxi, I hope.

It could be written just as authentically were I, indeed, in Biloxi, or, for that matter, with Stanley in darkest Africa. Biloxi never changes and neither does the training camp routine of a baseball club. So to a fellow who has been incarcerated in Biloxi with the Nats at this time of the season for a whole lot of years, the events that are taking place there, or will take place shortly, are as well known to your correspondent as the painful hangnail on his typing finger.

Unless I have been double-crossed, which would be a scurvy trick considering I am late at camp this year for the first time, I am able to report that the little advance guard rookie pitchers and catchers already have been met at the station by the chamber of commerce, the Biloxi Boys Band, and Mr. and Mrs. Mayor. They have been escorted through gayly decorated streets to their hotel and en route they heard from various chamber of commerce members that the weather is unusually cold for this time of year, I am sure. If it isn't unusually cold for this time of year, then the only explanation I can give is that the Biloxi weather this year is indeed unusually cold for this time of year.

Of all of the above, I am fairly certain. There are other matters, however, of which I am positive, and your correspondent will be on the scene to observe these faithfully recurrent items that always mark the Nats' stay at Biloxi. Herewith, before reporting these matters to the general public, I give my long-time clients a private list of the annual developments at Biloxi.

FEBRUARY 25—The rookies get their Washington uniforms, and ih them, they look exactly like rookies. The pinochle season opens.

February 27—Owner Clark Griffith makes his first pennant prediction: "It will be a wide-open race."

March 1—Manager Bucky Harris and the veteran pitchers arrive. Earl Whitehill and Bobby Burke, the salary holdouts, will go into conference with Griffith and escape asphyxiation from one of his rank cheroots by signing their 1935 contracts and getting out of there.

March 4—In this I am corroborated by the farmer's almanac, which has clocked this particular development each season for the last nine years. Bobby Burke will report that his arm is sore. Trainer Mike Martin will trace it to a shoulder strain.

March 6—Owner Clark Griffith comments on the 1935 prospects: "Whichever club that wins the flag will know it has been in a battle."

March 8—Second Baseman Buddy Myer arrives from Ellisville, Miss., two days ahead of schedule and the Nationals' pastime will become bridge instead of pinochle.

March 10—The regular infielders and outfielders will report. All except Heinie Manush, who never liked training camps anyway, and will be detained by some very original excuse.

March 12—There are apparently more red-snapper steaks where all those others came from and it still bulks large on the dinner menu, willy-nilly.

March 13—Clark Griffith opines that "the Nats will be up there all the way" in the 1935 pennant race.

MARCH 14—Much noise at the table of Buddy Myer in the dining room. It is Buddy's birthday again. Mrs. Myer has baked a cake again.

March 16—The Biloxi Lions Club presents Brother Griffith with a miniature lion paperweight which will repose in the bottom drawer of his desk at Griffith Stadium until the mayor drops up to Washington some time next summer, when, if Griffith knows he is coming, it will be shined up and put on display atop the desk.

March 18—Some reporter, hard up for a story, will coax Manager Harris into saying that the Nats' pitchers will be hitting pitchers this season, and that it's a shame to see big, strong guys like pitchers get up there at the plate and strike out, because being pitchers, they are not expected to hit.

March 20—Everybody will agree that Earl Whitehill is the hardest worker in camp. He will be out-perspiring Fred Schulte by ½ pint daily.

March 21—Clark Griffith predicts that "there are six or seven clubs that can win the pennant. It will be a wide-open race."

March 22—Manager Bucky Harris would like to tell his ball players not to fraternize with the newspapermen after working hours, but he has heard how Griffith balled out Joe Cronin for the same edict last year. Bucky still has his ideas on the subject, however.

March 24.—Aside from the weather being unusually cold in Biloxi for this time of year, the fish are biting unusually bad. Those red-snapper steaks are still with us, though, somehow.

March 29—Adieu to Biloxi. Baseball night at the Saenger Theater. Clark Griffith is called to the stage. "Any success the Nats might have in the 1935 pennant race will be due to the wonderful treatment received from the Biloxi Chamber of Commerce, Mayor O'Keefe, the New Biloxi Hotel, and the chief of police."

Travel More, Army, Navy Urged

Service Gridmen Should Play in All Sections, Cochran Says.

House Member Attacks Excuse of 'Studies and Money.'

By Dillon Graham.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

FOUR intersectional football games a season for the Army and Navy teams designed to enable all sections of the country to see them, was proposed yesterday by Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri.

"Why should the East be given almost all their games?" he asked.

"The taxpayers in other States, who help maintain the academies, are entitled to see these teams play," he said. "Let them play a few of their regular rivals, but they should play four games a year in various sections of the Nation."

For several months Cochran has dickered for a game between one of the Academies and a St. Louis eleven.

Will Continue Drive.

"All the academy authorities give me is sympathetic encouragement," he said. "But I'm going to keep driving at 'em until I get results."

The money angle and the time away from studies are points brought up by service authorities, Cochran said.

"Well, I understand they generally get 50 per cent of the receipts. We'll give 'em 85 per cent—or even all the cash.

"We are willing to make any agreement to get them to our State. We will even agree not to beat them bad," he laughed.

The Missourian recalled the teams had played at Chicago. "You can get to St. Louis just as fast as to Chicago," he said, adding that Southern opponents could be reached even quicker.

Won't Miss More Time.

"The boys won't miss any more time from their classes, and, anyway, there's nothing to keep them from studying on the train," he said.

Some time ago, when Cochran brought up the subject in the House, Representatives Ford and Costello of California and Dondero of Michigan expressed hope the service elevens would play in their States.

Cochran said he thought he expressed the sentiment of the House in saying Congress does not like the present arrangement of Army and Navy football schedules, and added:

"When the Army and Navy need votes (for appropriations), they do not confine their efforts to Representatives of the States where they let their football teams play."

Torrance Sets Indoor Mark In Shot-Put

Outdoor Champion Tosses Ball 53 Feet 1½ Inches at Charlotte.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 25.—Jack Torrance, world's outdoor shot put champion, tonight exceeded by 4¾ inches the recognized indoor record held by Leo Sexton, of the New York Athletic Club.

Competing in the first annual Charlotte indoor games, he tossed the 16-pound ball 53 feet 1½ inches.

Harry Williamson, University of North Carolina distance star, won the Barret mile, in 4 minutes and 27 seconds on the unbanked track.

The curley-haired Tarheel was off at the gun with an even pace, he maintained all the way to distance a select field. Ed McRae, also of North Carolina, placed second, and Bill Dunaj, Washington and Lee, was third.

The 1,000-yard run resulted in a dead heat between Headley, of Maryland, and Gammon, of North Carolina. The Tarheel held a lead of 5 yards as the last lap began, but the Old Liner closed fast to breast the tape simultaneously. They did the distance in 2 minutes, 27 1-10 seconds.

Earl Widmyer, Maryland's stocky speedster, won the 50-yard dash with a burst down the lanes that required but 5½ seconds. He was a step ahead of Charlie Hubbard, of North Carolina. Little, William and Mary, was third.

Forrest Townes, Georgia, carried off first place in the 50-yard hurdles in crossing the barriers in 6.6 seconds. McDonald, of Virginia, ran second and North Carolina's Tom Hawthorne was third. Schulher, Washington and Lee fell in the first heat and failed to qualify.

Bob Gardiner, of North Carolina, won the half-mile with four yards to spare over Evans, of Maryland. Rankin, of Georgia, who led most of the gruelling spring route, faded sharply in the two closing laps and finished third.

Earl Frazier, Davidson College's lean harrier, put on one of the finest performances of the meet in doing the 2-mile run in 10 minutes and 1 second.

District A. A. U. Urges Bar on Berlinger

By Dave Herman.

BARNEY BERLINGER, former American Olympic star, faces possible suspension from the National Amateur Athletic Union as the result of a protest filed yesterday by the District A. A. U., through its registration chairman, E. Joseph Aronoff.

Chairman Aronoff suggested the disbarment of the one-time University of Pennsylvania all-round track athlete on the grounds that Berlinger lost his amateur status by playing against the Heurich professional basket ball team last Sunday.

The recommendation that he be stripped of his simon-pure toga—for the time being at least—was sent to Dan Ferris, secretary of the National A. A. U., at his New York office.

Voice Same Opinion.

William Russell, president of the District A. A. U., and Winfree Johnson, secretary, and chairman of the basket ball committee, went over the matter thoroughly with Chairman Aronoff yesterday, and all three voiced the opinion that Berlinger had broken one, maybe two, of the big commandments in the A. A. U. rules.

Any drastic action on the part of the national association fathers might mean that the famous pentathlon, decathlon and septathlon star will be unable to compete in the 1936 Olympic championship in Germany. Berlinger, star in the 1928 event at Amsterdam, has already opened a vigorous campaign to land a place on Uncle Sam's team.

Played Full Game.

Berlinger was used at center for the Penn Athletic Club in its game with the Heurich Brewers. He played the full 40 minutes, and scored 5 points.

Registration Chairman Aronoff, in questioning Berlinger's ability as an amateur participant, cites notation 5, section E, paragraph 3, of the disbarment rules of the National A. A. U. as follows:

"By participating in any public competition or exhibition as a member of a team against another team one or more members of which are ineligible to compete as amateurs in the sport in which such participation occurred."

Cites Jim Peterson.

Chairman Aronoff also called attention to the fact that Jim Peterson, coach and player on the team, is a professional baseball player, and this, too, would be damaging evidence against Berlinger. Peterson, suffering with a wrenched knee, did not play here Sunday.

Aronoff then cited this violation in paragraph 2, rule 5, section E:

"By participating in any public competition or exhibition as a member of a team upon which there are one or more members who have received, do receive, or who are to receive directly or indirectly pay or financial benefits for participating, without having obtained as a condition precedent the consent in writing thus to participate from the national registration committee."

Finland May Get Olympics in 1940

Italy and Japan Engage in Verbal Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 25.—While representatives of Italy and Japan engaged in an animated verbal dispute over which nation would be host to the 1940 Olympic games, word spread through the committee chambers that the international classic may be awarded to Finland as a means of settling the contention.

Several weeks ago Japanese officials announced joyously that Italy has withdrawn its bid to hold the games, but today, as the international committee opened its session, Count Boacossa, the Italian delegate, said Italy was still a candidate.

The Japanese Ambassador, Sigmura, said Premier Benito Mussolini had promised his country Italy would drop its demand that the 1940 games be held in Rome. Count Boacossa replied that Il Duce's remarks had been misunderstood.

Caplin Won on Rival's Fouls, Seen by Few, Miller Explains

By Bill McCormick.

MUCH discussion on the pros and cons of awarding decisions is an inevitable aftermath to every important boxing contest. Particularly is this true of college tournaments in which feelings reach stratosphere levels and each institution is represented by legions of loyal followers who feel impelled to root to the very end for dear old Alma Mama.

The recent Southern Conference tournament, offering such close competition throughout as it did, drawing such large crowds as it did and arousing an unprecendented amount of interest, has given the pro and con boys enough material for a year's cussin' and discussion. Almost everyone interested in the fist-flinging fiesta has taken occasion to differ with the official verdicts in some of the bouts. The writer has publicly disagreed with at least two of the decisions rendered during the two-day tournament.

Miller Explains.

Under the circumstances, the logical way to settle the arguments is to obtain both sides, then weigh the evidence. The logical source for the official side of the argument is the officials themselves. So, let us go to Major Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller, Secretary of the District Boxing Commission, who acted as referee-judge throughout the tournament.

The first subject is the decision given against North Carolina's Max Novich in a 175-pound semifinal bout with Mortimer Calpin, of Virginia. The writer thought Novich won the contest on points by clearly outpointing Caplin while at the same time outpunching him.

"Novich was guilty of fouling throughout the bout, Miller informed us yesterday. "Referee Ollie Wolfe warned him four times against not stepping back one step on each break, but he persisted in popping back into action without taking the requisite step in reverse. For that, and that alone, I judged the bout against him as did Wolfe. Had he knocked out Caplin with one of the punches illegally delivered, he would have lost on a foul—so he couldn't win."

Went Unnoticed.

The writer confesses not having caught this particular foul and confesses also had he noticed it, he would not have known enough to score the fight against Novich. In other words, we were wrong when we sounded off against the decision in favor of Caplin.

Next under discussion with Miller was the decision given Capt. Freddy Lloyd, of Duke, over co-Capt. Gordon Rainey, of Virginia, in the featherweight semifinal. Judge Ollie Wolfe scored the bout for Rainey by one point. Judge Heinie Miller and Referee Ed Brockman scored the contest for Lloyd by one point. The writer's scoresheet showed Rainey two points ahead at the finish.

There was no question of fouling involved in the featherweight bout. All discussion regarding the winner hinges solely on judgment. All concerned scored the first two rounds for Lloyd and the final two-minute period of punching for Rainey. Brockman and Miller gave Lloyd more points in the first two rounds than he lost to Rainey in the last. Wolfe and the writer thought Rainey not only wiped out Lloyd's lead, but acquired a clear-cut margin with his stirring eleventh-hour rally.

The writer still thinks Rainey did well enough in the final round to win the contest and, no doubt, Wolfe is of the same opinion. However, as said before, that is wholly a matter of opinion—and it is diversity of opinion that makes college boxing tournaments.

Many were astounded when Ray Matulewicz, Duke's outstanding 165-pounder, was eliminated in the first round by Mike Lombardo, of Maryland. The Blue Devil boxer lost the bout wholly because of persistent fouling.

"I gave Matulewicz seven warnings for holding and hitting, one for rabbit-punching and one for a low blow which was not apparent to the press row, but was seen by Brockman, who was judging from the other side of the ring," says Miller. "I consider Ray one of the best college boxers I have ever seen, but he lost his head in this fight and even though he clearly outfought Lombardo, there was nothing for myself and the judges to do but to deprive him of the victory."

Confusion in Others.

Two other bouts terminated in some confusion. After Ivan Nedomatsky stopped Marion Brooks, of Virginia, many thought the bout had been halted by the referee. This misunderstanding is wholly attributable to the foolish college rule which prohibits an arbiter from swinging his arm with the count.

"I counted 10 over Brooks," Miller insists. "He wasn't up when I had completed the count, so I tried to indicate to the spectators that he had been tolled over by helping raise him before I held up Nedomatsky's right hand as the winner. I counted as loud as I could, but there was so much bedlam going on that I could hardly make Brooks hear me. It is the referee's duty to quiet the spectators, but he can not forsake a bout at a crucial moment like that."

Miller was highly criticized in some quarters when he halted a bout between Lorenzo Taylor, highly favored South Carolina bantamweight, and Maynard Diehl, of North Carolina, with but a second or two to go in the final round. Taylor, who had established a clear superiority in points, had spurted blood from an old cut over his left eye early in the battling.

When the cut first was reopened, Miller examined it and allowed the

Fuller, Irked, Vows to K.O. Ambers

Attacks New Yorkers for Picking His Rival as No. 1 Challenger.

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Sammy Fuller, Boston's bull-shouldered little Italian, looked up from the rubbing table in Stillman's gymnasium today and announced he would get proper revenge on New York's three boxing commissioners.

"I'll knock Lou Ambers right into their laps Friday night, and let those three palookas revive the guy they named No. 1 lightweight challenger," he declared. "Won't that be purty?"

It seems that Sammy was irritated no end when the sages of swat designated the Herkimer hurricane as outstanding challenger in the Empire State instead of Mr. Fuller. And his Adam's apple is still perspiring.

"Ya notice the Illinois commissioners didn't make that mistake," he emphasized. "They didn't pick Ambers—a guy who ought to go out and get himself a reputation. No, sir! They picked me."

Fuller's first prebattle statement, amazingly flamboyant for the usually reticent Sammy, followed his first New York workout in preparation for the 15-rounder with Ambers at Madison Square Garden. Except for a slight cold he appeared in excellent shape and already under the 135-pound limit. After the workout he registered 134 pounds. Ambers, who went through his paces at the Pioneer gym, scaled 136¼.

Fuller's confidence is shared by betting men who have installed him the 7-to-5 favorite.

Joe Medwick to Have His Tonsils Removed

Carteret, N. J., Feb. 25 (AP).—Joe Medwick, husky young outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, will have his tonsils removed at Perth Amboy General Hospital tomorrow morning, it was learned today.

Medwick's physician, Dr. N. B. Cohen, said there was nothing serious about the baseball player's condition but that his tonsils had been "acting up and so he decided to have them out."

Brief Workout Is Held by Nats At Biloxi Camp

By a Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 25.—The Nationals opened their sixth consecutive training camp in this Gulf Coast city today with better than 20 pitchers and catchers participating in a short limbering-up session under the eye of Trainer Mike Martin. Martin was overcautious with the youngsters, curbing their enthusiasm to guard against soreness.

Practice was confined to a turn around the field, a short pepper drill, a bit of throwing to take the kinks out of the player's arms and a volley ball game.

Joe Cronin, former manager of the Griffmen, could not resist the lure of a visit to watch his old team perform in its first practice and came to the park as a spectator. He finally broke down, however, grabbed a bat and knocked grounders to the pitchers.

Tomorrow the session will probably lengthen a bit. The volley ball game proved very popular with the youngsters and every one wanted to play at one time.

Two Birdies At Finish Decisive

Laffoon Falters and Is Passed by Clark for 2d Place.

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 25.—Walter Hagen, veteran of 23 years' campaigning on the links and past holder of many championships, won the Gasparilla Open at Palma Ceia today for his first victory in two years—and $700 in cash.

Needing a couple of birdies to remain in the running as he finished the sixteenth hole of the final round, "The Haig" negotiated the last two holes under par and posted a 280, even par for the 72 holes, and a lone stroke ahead of a colorful field.

Clarence Clark, towering, curly-haired pro from Bloomfield, N. J., posted a 281 a few minutes before Hagen stepped upon the No. 17 tee and it looked as if the veteran's cause was lost.

Holes 45-Foot Putt.

It still looked that way after he had smacked his drive, an arching shot that found the green all right, but came to rest 45 feet from the pin.

Nonchalantly the 42-year-old veteran strode up to his ball, hit it crisply, and it rolled straight into the cup. The gallery standing breathlessly around the green cheered.

The final hole was even more dramatic. Hagen got off a fine tee shot, a drive that carried about 230 yards. His second, however, bounced over a tree and rolled into a bunker. He chipped out beautifully, his ball stopping just 3 feet from the pin. He didn't miss that putt.

This, however, was only half the story of how Dame Fortune took a hand in the fourth annual Gasparilla Open. In Hagen's wake, taking old man par apart, was one of those up-and-coming young golfers, handsome Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, the only player given a chance of beating Hagen.

Laffoon Falters.

As he stepped off the No. 14 green, Laffoon was one up on par and needed a pair of birdies on the last four holes to tie The Haig, three to beat him. Laffoon parked his second on the fifteenth green 12 feet from the pin, and then all but poked himself out of the running right then and there with three putts.

Laffoon took a par on No. 16 and still had a chance of tying The Haig by bagging birdies on the last two holes. On the short seventeenth, however, he got off a tee shot that headed for a trap but hit a spectator on the head and bounced onto the green 12 feet from the pin. He missed the putt and took a par 3.

This gave Clark second-place money with a card of 69-71-69-72—281. Laffoon finished third with 71-70-71-70—282.

Hines, Perkins Fifth.

Jimmy Hines, Timber Point, N. J., and Phil Perkins, Willoughby, Ohio, tied for fifth place with 284's. Clarence Doser, Rochester, N. Y., was next with 285, Johnny Revolta, Tripoli, Wis., seventh with 286, and Ed Brook, Winter Haven, Fla., eighth with 287.

Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, former British Open champion and winner of the last two Gasparilla Opens, finished in a deadlock with Leo Mallory, of Noroton, Conn., for ninth place at 288.

Golden Miller Still Choice for Chase

Two U. S. Horses Also Win Backing.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 25.—With betting light, a callover today of odds on the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree on March 29 showed Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, the 1934 winner, still a prime favorite at 4 to 1.

The American candidate, J. H. (Jock) Whitney's Thomond II, remains the second choice at 15 to 2, with J. B. Snow's Delaneice, another of the American entrants, at 100 to 8. They finished in that order behind the Paget steeplechaser last year.

Whitney's Double Crossed found no new support during the week and his odds lengthened to 33 to 1, while Really True, well fancied before, dropped down in the list at 100 to 7.

Dog Trials Delayed.

Bowed Tendon Forced Failure Of Equipoise, Whitney Says

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25.—An explanation of the dismal showing of Equipoise, former great race horse, who failed to come close to winning the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap last Saturday, was given today by Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, the owner.

Whitney's statement was:

"Although excuses should not be made it seems only fair to me to express to the many people who so loyally backed Equipoise the reason for his poor race Saturday in the Santa Anita Handicap.

"In fairness to the horse, who has never in his career run a race which was not marked by courage and gameness, I want to say this:

"I believe people generally know he was not a sound horse. Last summer, at Saratoga, he ruptured slightly the main tendon of his left foreleg. This had always been his sound leg. Saturday, during the running of the race, the weak tendon gave way, causing a bow. This, in my opinion, is enough to account for his race, and, furthermore, show that he finished with all the gameness that has always been characteristic of him."

Tearout, Florida Derby Hopeful, 5-Length Victor at Hialeah

Epical Fades, Finishing Second

Six of Seven Favorites Win; Wayne Wright Rides Triple.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 25. The final fortnight of racing at the Miami Jockey Club's plant got under way here this afternoon, with the Nassau Purse for 3-year-olds, at 7 furlongs, and split into two divisions, featuring the washday program. The first half of the event saw Tearout, Florida Derby hopeful of D. B. Midkiff and Trainer H. Wells, racing to a hollow victory in the role of a 2-to-1 favorite.

The brown son of Terry—Rail On, cleverly handled by Bobby Merritt, led home C. H. Thieriot's Epical by five lengths in 1:24 4-5. Mrs. S. A. Ketchell's Seawick was third, a length and a half behind and a nose before Col. Greene.

Epical had to race the speedy Elwawa into the ground in the first half mile before being asked to cope with Tearout's challenge. Merritt sat still with plenty of horse under him until leaving the backstretch. The colt caught Epical before entering the final straightaway and galloped clear with little effort.

Jim John Is Winner.

D. A. Wood's steady going colt, Jim John, ran another game race to take the second half of the Nassau by a half length from W. F. Axton's Paradisical. Right Rank, off poorly, ran a winning race and wound up third, two lengths away. Wayne Wright, leading local pilot, broke Jim John well in the bad start. Civil War beat the gate and stole a good lead over the ultimate winner, only to curl up at the head of the stretch. Jim John assumed a narrow lead over Paradisical and held on to it in another hectic finish. The winner, an $8.20 choice, covered the 7 furlongs in 1:24 3-5. He was the fourth favorite to win in five events.

Wayne Wright rode his second straight winner, his twenty-fifth of the meeting, and gave form players five out of six when Volta Maid easily garnered the honors in the sixth event. The mare wore down Broadsword in the stretch and won by three lengths in 1:37 1-5 for the mile. Broadsword saved the place by a length and a half from My Purchase.

Midshipman Triumphs.

Wright made it three straight and the talent recorded its sixth success in seven races when Midshipman took the last purse by four lengths from True Sentiment. He paid $7. Luculent was third.

Black Highbrow, stout-hearted youngster from the stable of L. E. Komorus, was best of the 2-year-old platers that performed in the opening dash of 3 furlongs. Well handled by the improved Apprentice Jimmy Lynch, the $4.60 favorite came from close off the pace in the last sixteenth of a mile to subdue the pace-making Zowie by a half-length. Willow Wood raced with the pace from the start and relinquished the place by a head in the last few strides.

Pays $59.60 Mutuel.

Maiden 3-year-olds and upward competed in the second race, with Miss Webb, a 3-year-old daughter of Chilhowee, making her first start a successful one at odds of $59.60 for $2. The veteran George Arnold sent the filly into a long lead, but his mount stopped in the last furlong and barely lasted to beat the fast-closing Santa Barfly by a nose. Winged Flight was headed for the place.

A 59-to-1 shot came within an inch of giving long-shot players another score in the 6 furlongs of the third race. Knights Hope fought it out with the $4.50 choice, Moane Keala, all the way, bowing in the last stride. Apprentice Jimmy Lynch, who, it is rumored, may sign with an Eastern stable of note before long, did a splendid job of holding the favorite together in the hard-fought contest, registering a double and accounting for both ends of the daily double, which paid $9.20. Miss Snow was a well-beaten third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS WEBB, $59.60, $26.90, $9.40; SANTA BARFLY, $4.10, $3.40; WINGED FLIGHT, $3.00.
MISS WEBB raced GAY MUSIC into defeat, opened a wide gap around turn, but stopped badly and just lasted to win. SANTA BARFLY was hard ridden all the way and would have won in another stride. WINGED FLIGHT, slow to get into his stride, came around field on turn, then shot through on inside, and was running very fast at end. PORNELLA ran a good race.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:31½. Off at 3:35. Winner, Miss M. White's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOANE KEALA, $4.50, $3.10, $2.80; KNIGHTS HOPE, $40.10, $14.80; MISS SNOW, $4.50.
MOANE KEALA, away fast, showed good speed, and stood long drive gamely and just won. KNIGHTS HOPE, well up all the way, appeared to have race at the sixteenth pole, but hung in final stride. MISS SNOW, well up from the start, ran a good race. VICTORIUM came from far back and was a fast-going fourth. VERA CRUZ had speed for a half-mile, then tired. RARE BEN ran a fair race.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). The Nassau (first division). Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:07. Winner, D. B. Midkiff's By Terry—Rain On. Trained by H. Wells. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:24 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEAROUT, $6.00, $4.10, $3.60; EPICAL, $8.20, $5.70; SEAWICK, $8.70.
TEAROUT, under an energetic ride, was hustled along from the start, came around the leader to stretch, drew out, and won going away. EPICAL raced ELWAWA into defeat, but tired badly. SEAWICK worked her way up on inside and was third in final stride. COL. GREENE was hard ridden all the way. ELWAWA was used up trying to keep with the pace. HOWS CHANCES broke slow and trailed far back. He was never a contender.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). The Nassau (second division). Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start bad. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:38½. Winner, D. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM JOHN, $8.20, $3.90, $3.30; PARADISICAL, $11.20, $6.50; RIGHT RANK, $4.80.
JIM JOHN was fortunate at the start to get away. He was kept well up in early running, ran into lead in stretch, and stood long drive gamely. PARADISICAL moved up very fast around turn and held on well. RIGHT RANK was probably best, but was unlucky at the break. He was away poorly, but closed in big gap. JUDGE BLAKE was taken wide all the way and ran a fair race. CIVIL WAR beat the gate by several lengths, opened wide gap, but stopped to a walk. BOSTON BROOK had speed for a half-mile, then dropped back thoroughly beaten.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:10½. Winner, W. A. Jones' b. m. VOLTA MAID, running back to her previous good race, was rated along to the stretch, where she was sent to the lead, drew away, and won nicely in hand. BROADSWORD displayed keen speed and held on well. MY PURCHASE was hard ridden all the way and had no excuse. STONE MARTIN made a fair effort. MISS CAREFUL ran her race.

Cania Returns $74.20 In Victory at Houston

Houston, Tex., Feb. 25 (AP).—Cania, little brown filly by Bull Dog from Pot au Sucre, cantered away with the 4-furlong dash by three open lengths at Epsom Downs today as 2-year-olds made their first appearance at the meet. Biting winds held attendance to a handful.

The winner gave the form players a serious jolt, paying $74.20 straight. Belgian Lad placed and Raffles Lad was third.

Rail-Hugging Habit Costly To Ekky

Might Have Beaten Record of Sun Beau Without Disqualifications.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25.—An old rail-hugging habit which brought three disqualifications possibly prevented Equipoise, hard-luck turf king of the country who was retired to stud today, from surpassing Sun Beau's money-winning record.

A big handicap winner in every stage of his career, Ekky pulled up lame to finish seventh in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap classic last Saturday and relinquish all hope of exceeding Sun Beau's record earnings of $376,744. Equipoise fell approximately $42,000 short of the mark.

Formal announcement that the famous Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney 7-year-old chestnut will be retired to stud was made by Ekky's trainer, T. J. (Jim) Healey, who said the horse had developed a troublesome leg which is badly filled.

To Go to Lexington.

Ekky and the entire Whitney stable will be shipped to the Whitney farm in Lexington, Ky., at the conclusion of the Santa Anita meeting, March 9. The Whitney stable has been one of the largest money winners at Santa Anita.

When Equipoise finished far behind Azucar as the 7-year-old reformed steeplechaser recorded a surprise triumph to capture the richest purse ever paid a winner on the track, Ekky's earnings amounted to $334,110. Had it not been for his rail-hugging trait, however, it is possible a portion of Saturday's purse would not have been necessary to place him above Sun Beau in the ranks of money winners.

Same Violation.

When a 2-year-old, Ekky was disqualified in the Youthful Stakes at Jamaica for bearing in on Vanderpool. Last year he was disqualified in the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont. In this race, Ekky, because of the fouling decision, lost to Mr. Khayyam after winning by three lengths. Officials ruled he was guilty of the same violation.

More winnings had to be put down as paper losses here February 18 in the Oakwood Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth prepping for the $100,000 event. In a spectacular duel with his traditional foe, Twenty Grand, Ekky again was disqualified for interference, although the Whitney star finished a length ahead of Twenty Grand.

Inter-High Grid, Court Seasons Money Failures, Is Indication

Cancellation Of Football Is Cited

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE interhigh football and basket ball seasons of 1934-35 were financial failures in the estimation of Assistant Principal John Paul Collins, of Eastern, interhigh athletic association president and treasurer, and of Assistant Principal Lawrence G. Hoover, of Central.

While President Collins was stating yesterday that the athletic association "will be lucky if it breaks even on basket ball this year," Mr. Hoover was blaming cancellation of the last three games of the football series as the result of the first fight at the Tech-Western game as responsible for a marked decrease in the funds available for athletics at Central.

"Without the receipts we had planned on from the last three games of the football series," Hoover said, "Central's athletic budget has been forced more or less to the wall."

Face Curtailment.

"There is no question that we can get by," he continued, "but it does mean that the new equipment that we prefer to furnish the players must be foregone in many instances. We have already been forced to cancel the swimming team's trip to Massanutten Military Academy, which would have meant an outlay of $100."

Other than to say that it was "considerable," Mr. Hoover did not name Central's loss caused by the cancellation of the grid games, but from other quarters it was learned to be close to $200. The Central officials said the decrease undoubtedly would prevent Central's sending a relay team to the Penn relays.

Another reason for the necessity of pulling the financial strings tighter at Central this year, Mr. Hoover said, arises from the new custom of pooling all the high schools' receipts from sale of athletic association tickets and then appropriating a certain amount to each school. Formerly, each school kept the receipts from its own ticket sales.

Is More Difficult.

"Under this new system," Mr. Hoover pointed out, "a school like Roosevelt, which possibly may have bought few tickets, may be receiving more than it is spending. Our purpose here at Central is to have athletics self-supporting, but it has been considerably more difficult this year to carry on as the result of these things."

Mr. Collins pointed out that the football receipts for the games that were played were well up to standard, if not better than other years, but said also that the three-game cancellation, of course, hurt receipts.

Basket Ball Disappoints.

It was basket ball about which the Eastern official was particularly disappointed. He expressed a distinct preference for holding next year's games on Friday nights as often as possible in double-header style. The double-header system was abolished this year in favor of holding the games at separate schools, but Mr. Collins expressed the opinion that the two-game plan is preferable both from a standpoint of public and financial interest.

"Up to this year," Mr. Collins said, "we always have finished comfortably ahead in basket ball. When all's said and done, we will be lucky to have broken even this year. Next year will probably see a different system in use and it might well be the double-header plan again worked in with night games."

Middleburg Trials Successful But Riding Rules Are Criticized

By Nina Carter Tabb.

GOOD horses, brilliant riders and wonderful performances made the Middleburg hunter trials an event long to be remembered. Horses, most of them thoroughbreds, very fit from their season's hunting, were shown around the course, jumping post-and-rail fences, stone walls and chicken coops, up hill and down—they were doing just what they would have to do on a good run after hounds.

In spite of the bitterly cold weather, there was a large crowd of horse enthusiasts on hand, watching closely every event of this interesting day. Bonfires were made, adding a bit of cheer and comfort.

There were so many good riders and horses that one felt sorry for the judges who had to decide the classes and wondered how they could be wise enough to do it. Everything passed off smoothly and though many must have been disappointed that their favorite horse did not win, they took it good-naturedly.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, with 16 entries, carried off the championship bowl with her horse Cypress de Beau. This horse had won Class B, the big class of the day, when he was ridden faultlessly by Mrs. James C. Hamilton, who as Peggy Keith, of Warrenton, ten years ago was known all over the country as America's leading "farm girl." Mrs. Whitney, riding Bon Diable, the horse that won this class last year, was second.

Everyone enjoyed seeing the horses go, but there was much shaking of heads among some of the old Virginians as to "what our country is coming to," for, although hunter trials are not run under the sanction of any association, some rules were made this year that kept some of our best Virginia riders out, because they are receiving salaries for managing stables.

There are many who think it a mistake to try to draw lines so closely in our sporting events, especially in these days when jobs are so scarce and the young men have to take what they can get. One questions whether it is sporting to stop them from doing the thing they do best because they are making a living at it. It is such a thin line between amateurs and those the rules consider professionals that you hear people on all sides saying, "If that person is allowed to ride, then such and such should be allowed also."

In our Virginia hunting country, when Virginia boys are barred, it causes great feeling.

C. U.'s Boxers In Drill for Carnegie

It was a comparatively easy afternoon for the Cards, but unless La Fond has turned over a new leaf they'll make up for it this afternoon. The squad—substitutes and all—usually works about two hours a day, topped off with 10 three-minute rounds of sparring, rope-skipping and shadow-boxing.

La Fond is genuinely concerned with Carnegie, although the Plaid ringmen have not engaged in actual combat this season. Tech is reported to have an abundance of material and Coach Ernie Sesto knows how to utilize his material to the fullest extent. The cagey C. U. mentor believes the visitors will come prepared to upset his team.

There is much walling and gnashing of teeth at Brookland, too, because Ivan Nedomatsky and Lyman McAboy of Maryland will not be able to appear against the Cards March 11, at College Park. Although both Terrapin punchers would have ruled favorites over their respective rivals, the C. U. contingent had hoped to get a crack at them.

Thomas and Parsons Favorites in Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Davis, W. Va., Feb. 25.—Thomas and Parsons are rated as favorites to win the sectional basket ball tournament opening here next Friday. These teams have divided in regularly scheduled games and both have good records.

The winner of the tourney here will compete in the regional at Keyser. Parsons won last year and went on to cop the State title.

Va. Beach Due To Get Men's Mid-Atlantic

Tourney Sites and Dates Will Be Decided at Meeting Saturday.

THE Middle Atlantic Golf Association, which will hold its annual meeting at the Willard Hotel Saturday night, is going to stick by its original dates of June 12-15 for the men's events, with indications that the Princess Anne Country Club, Virginia Beach, will get the call.

Representatives from the Virginia, District and Maryland golf associations will attend, and will attempt to find out why there has been a decided lack of interest in the Middle Atlantic events in recent years.

Billy Howell will attend the meeting in an attempt to stir up interest in his Southern amateur championship in Richmond June 18-22. Manor Club already has shifted its invitation dates to May 21-24 to help the Richmonders out, but the Maryland association, it seems, might complicate matters again by grabbing the June 18-22 dates.

Roger Peacock, the Indian Spring amateur ace, played like a demon yesterday in a 15-hole tour of his home course. He picked up George Diffenbaugh, Al Treder, Cliff Spencer, Harry Peacock and Sam Rice on the fourth hole, and shot the remainder of the route in one under par. Peacock had five threes on the last six holes of the first nine to go under par for the six. Spencer had 76, Diffenbaugh, 77, and Treder, 78.

Allegany High to Play Baltimore Champions

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 25.—Allegany High's basket ball team will play Southern High, champion of one division of the Maryland Scholastic Association, on Friday, March 8, here.

For several years Cumberland fans have wanted to see what Allegany would do when opposed by one of the crack Baltimore aggregations.

Old Line, Army Boxing Card Toss-up

Maryland Conceded Even Chance Despite Loss of Two Stars.

BARRING additional injuries which may pop up during the week, the University of Maryland's boxing team, which almost won the Southern Conference boxing crown over the week-end, will go into its battle with Army Saturday night at Ritchie Coliseum with an even chance of adding the West Pointers to their string of victims.

Lyman McAboy's loss to the team for the remainder of the season, and the possibility that Ivan Nedomatsky, new conference lightweight champion may not fight again because of a fractured right hand, have lessened Maryland's chances of whipping their guests. With the regular team intact, Maryland ordinarily would be a 2-1 choice.

The match features Maryland's second annual All-University night program, which will be inaugurated by a basket ball game between the Terps and St. John's of Annapolis at 7:30 o'clock. Folk dancing, sprint races, singing and possibly a vaudeville skit will round out a plump program.

Lost to Terrors.

Army's mittmen lost to Western Maryland by a 5-3 count in their opening skirmish of the season, but the Cadets fought without their star heavyweight Bob Stillman, who was laid up with illness. Stillman recovered and so did Army and they went on to whip Harvard, Yale and M. I. T. Maryland should be a trifle tougher for the Cadets than any of the above, however.

To facilitate the handling of the capacity crowd expected for the festivities, the doors of Ritchie Coliseum will be closed at 8:15 o'clock, and reopened at 9:30 to admit those who want to see only boxing.

Referee Is Named For Cage Tourney

John G. Long to Officiate at Keyser Event.

By a Special Correspondent.

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 25.—A. G. Springer, director of the sectional basket ball tournament to be held here next Friday and Saturday, announced today that John G. Long, of Cumberland, Md., had been selected as referee for the main clashes. A local official will handle some of the games.

The regional tourney, bringing together the winners of the sectionals at Davis, Martinsburg, Terra Alta and Keyser, also will be staged here with Springer as director. Both sectional and regional contests will be played in the Potomac State College gym.

Piedmont, Romney, Ridgeley, Capon Bridge, Keyser, and perhaps Elk Garden, will be represented in the sectional here. Thomas, Circleville, Parsons, Franklin, Petersburg, Moorefield, Davis and Bayard will compete at Davis. Preston County schools will play at Terra Alta, while Shepherdstown, Berkeley Springs, Charles Town, Martinsburg, Harpers Ferry and others play at Martinsburg.

George Dunlap Is Upset In Pinehurst Golf Play

He was defeated, 2 and 1, by Francis C. Robertson, former Vermont champion.

Dodgers Laugh Way Through First Drill

'Run Fast, Don't Get Hurt,' Is Stengel's Slogan; 18 Men Report.

By Edward J. Neil,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 25.—The merry men of Casey Stengel and Brooklyn, the club that's still in the National League, Bill Terry take note, joined hands under the sun on Tinker Field today and solemnly launched the major league training season.

That is, they launched it as solemnly as Casey and the Dodgers can launch anything, which is serious under the surface, hilarious on top. Some pitchers threw, some batters hit, everybody played the infield and tried to duck shagging flies, and while it was fun it was also a warming, perspiration-inciting workout under the heat circumstances.

Master of Ceremonies.

"The slogan of this club this year," he howled to his assorted athletes, 18, and Coach Otto Miller, "is run fast and don't get hurted. We've got just enough to go around."

His eyes gleamed at the sight of the giant Babe Phelps, the catcher he got on waivers during the winter from the Chicago Cubs to assist Al Lopez, the Cubanola, with the receiving.

"Look at that man belt 'em," screamed Casey from a safe place in the infield behind 6-foot-4-inch Les Munns, a right-hand pitching holdover. "He hits 'em low, he hits 'em high, he hits 'em over the fence. Take note, ye sluggards, and do likewise."

Varied Assortment.

Pitchers and catchers and others who couldn't resist the chance to swing into action again answered Casey's call. There were Munns, Watson Clark and Emil Leonard of the regular pitching staff and several assorted rookies, Harry Eisenstadt, a Brooklyn sandlot right hander; Bob Edwards and Havey Green, right handers from Albany and Daytona, respectively; Tom Baker, of New Iberia, La., and two southpaws in whom Casey has great faith, Bob Logan and Frankie Lamanske.

The latter pair look like twins, are short, dark and chunky. Logan won 20 games for Indianapolis last season, while Lamanske, with Davenport, Iowa, struck out 226 and won 17 straight, both records for organized ball in 1934.

Other Rookies.

Lopez and Phelps had a rookie named Fred Maas from Brooklyn to help with the catching, and another from Tampa, Manuel Onis, protege of Lopez. Joe Stripp, who lives here, Danny Taylor and Glenn Chapman, outfield holdovers, and Tony Cuccinello, all turned up to share in the fun. Old Tom Zachary, veteran southpaw, didn't report and may not come to camp at all, with the club's permission. Ray Benge and Johnny Babich, right-hand veterans, missed connections somewhere, along with Walter Millies, another rookie catcher.

"All we got to do is hustle," Casey decided. "We haven't got too much, but we got enough to make the first division. Yes, sir, we're still in the league."

Togs Lost, W. & L. Borrows Rivals'

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 25. Washington and Lee's Generals have lost a lot of basket ball games this season. Now they've lost their uniforms.

The team took a trip to South Carolina during the week-end to test the quintets in the Palmetto State. On the road between Clemson and Columbia baggage containing the Virginian's uniforms was lost from their autos.

They played South Carolina in borrowed togs, and on their return dug up their practice outfits and had them cleaned to wear in the Southern Conference tournament that starts in Raleigh Thursday.

Maryland Eyes Conference Track Title

FIGURING on a basis of past performances, present conditions and future prospects, Maryland's track squad appears to have better than an even chance of copping the Southern Conference laurels at the indoor games scheduled Saturday, March 9, at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Third last year with 17 points, the Old Liners will compete in eight individual events and 1-mile relay, and they seem to be balanced well enough to pick up enough points to score heavily in all departments.

Earl Widmyer, the Southern express who is just attaining maturity as a sprinter, will lead the Terps into action. Widmyer tied the 60-yard indoor record in winning that event last season and has never lost a 100 or 220 yard dash in dual meets. He'll be Maryland's big threat in the sprints.

To Team With Archer.

Joe Archer, a sophomore, who made a clean sweep of the freshmen sprints last season, will team with Widmyer and is expected to get what Earl misses.

The mile quartet will comprise Bob Archer, Milo Sonen, Warren Evans and Coleman Headley, who bested Princeton and Yale in the Millrose games at New York several weeks ago. This combination looms as one of the speediest in Dixie and is not expected to experience undue difficulty in winning.

Maryland's other entries will be Selby Frank, 880; Bob Slye, broad jump and hurdles; Will Beers, broad jump and high hurdles; Bob Boucher, high jump, and Danny Drake, pole vault. Headley and Evans also may compete in other events in addition to running with the relay team.

Hubbell Sees Action.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 25 (U.P.).—Carl Hubbell, ace of the New York Giants rifle corps, was first on the mound today to begin shooting the ball over the plate as the spring training period opened. He was followed by the rest of the big four — Hal Schumacher, Freddy Fitzsimmons and Roy Parmelee.

Three Virginia Fives to Play In Tourney

V. M. I., Virginia, W. & L. to Compete Thursday at Raleigh.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 25.—Virginia will be represented in the first three games that inaugurate the fourteenth annual basket ball tournament of the Southern Conference at Raleigh Thursday.

When Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus tosses in a new ball to signalize the beginning of activities at 3 p. m., the V. M. I. Cadets will take the court against North Carolina State, rated a possible winner of the tourney.

The University of Virginia Cavaliers, who have improved considerably the past few weeks, will meet Duke's Blue Devils, one of the strongest contenders for the crown, at 4:30 p. m.

W. & L. Faces Clemson.

Washington and Lee, defending champions, who have had their troubles with their 1935 schedule, will meet an almost unknown quantity in Clemson when they open the night program at 8 o'clock. Few comparisons exist for measuring the Tigers against other conference clubs, though they dropped the Generals last week in a fast skirmish.

The nightcap will be the "battle of the Carolina's," with South Carolina's Gamecocks, 1933 champions, battling North Carolina's Tarheels, seeded No. 1 in the drawings. The Tarheels haven't won a tournament since 1926, but are favored to top the conference this year because throughout the season they have possessed the faculty of putting on the pressure when they had to win. They've beaten the Birds twice in regular games. Their only loss was administered by Duke.

40 Quintets Entered In Clarksburg Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 25.—More than 40 invited teams have entered for the second annual all-Northern West Virginia independent basket ball tournament to be held March 11-14 at the Carmichael Auditorium here. Entries will be received until March 4.

Higgins, McNair Reach Pay Accord With Muck

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 25 (AP).—Connie Mack's pay roll troubles were cut in half today with messages from Pinky Higgins and Eric McNair, infielders, that they accepted his terms and would report for spring training in a few days.

5 Cumberland Players Sent To Danville

By a Special Correspondent.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 25.—Members of the Cumberland American Legion junior national championship team, signed late last summer by Herb Pennock, acting for the Boston Red Sox, have received training orders from Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston club.

One of the boys, Wayne Triplett, husky 200-pound right-hand hurler, has been advised to report to Charlotte of the Piedmont League late in March. Pennock, since his trip here, has been placed in charge of the Charlotte club and asked to have Triplett placed in his charge.

Others to Danville.

Phil Fleming, pitcher; George Kraft, infielder, and Pete Horworth, Ken Clark and Fred (Tack) Clark, outfielders, have been notified to report on April 4 to Danville of the Virginia State League. All except Fred Clark served with the legion team during the championship eliminations. He was not eligible for legion competition because of his age.

There is still a possibility, it is said, that Triplett will spend a part of the training season with the Red Sox. The Bedford County, Pa., boy, because of his size, is regarded as an exceptional prospect by Pennock.

A Red Sox contract also was received for Bobby Shaffer, but at last report the Hyndman, Pa., boy had not signed. Shaffer, who played with Corriganville in 1933, and Frostburg in 1934, is said to be considering an offer to try out with Johnstown in the Midatlantic League.

Radcliffe Named.

The appointment of Hubert Radcliffe, former Corriganville Hustler manager and star back stop, as playing pilot and coach of the American Legion team, was announced last night by W. Earl Brooke, athletic officer of Fort Cumberland Post.

Radcliffe, former Allegany High and Shepherd College athlete, will succeed Frank Zahradka as coach and Brooks as manager. Brooks, however, will continue to direct the business of the club.

The American Legion, according to Brooks, will follow the same program that enabled Cumberland to win the national junior championship last year. It is planned to remain in the Interstate League.

Virginia's Tank Team Defeats Duke by Rally

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 25.—Virginia swimmers overcame long lead to defeat Duke's defending Southern Conference champions today in the last meet of regular season. The Cavaliers apparently were hopelessly defeated and trailed by 15 points with three events to go, but they rallied to win.

Carroll Dailey, of Duke, set a new conference record by swimming the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:40.02, but the real hero of the meet was Cavalier Capt. Charlie Prince. After winning the backstroke race he gave his mates two-thirds of pool length advantage on first leg of medley relay, which Virginia won.

Summary:

100-yard free style—Winner, Mervine (Duke); second, Whiting (Duke); third, Call (Virginia). Time, 56.5 seconds.

Diving—Winner, Mackenzie (Va.); second, Winston (Duke); third, Wronal (Va.).

220-yard free style—Winner, Armistead (Va.); second, Harden (Va.); third, Budd (Duke). Time, 2:43.3.

200-yard breast stroke—Winner, Daily (Duke); second, Tennant (Duke); third, Owens (Va.). Time, 2:40.4. New conference record.

150-yard back stroke—Winner, Prince (Va.); second, Crance (Va.); third, Stillman (Duke). Time, 1:51.3.

50-yard free style—Winner, Mervine; second, Whiting (Duke); third, Englehard (Va.). Time, 0:25.6.

440-yard free style—Winner, Budd (Duke); second, Parks (Va.); third, Wilson (Duke). Time, 6:07.9.

Miller Explains Tourney Verdicts

bout to continue after warning Taylor he would stop the contest if the eye was hit again. It was hit with but a few seconds to go and blood gushed from the deep gash. Miller halted the proceedings instantly.

"If there was only one second to go, I'd halt a bout with an eye like that," Miller maintains. "What is more important—saving an eye, winning a bout? With the eye as it was, Taylor would have been forced to forfeit anyway, as it later developed, so I can not understand where there is any room for argument on that score."

Neither can the writer understand where there is any room for argument on Miller's action, but we don't think many arbiters would have had the courage to follow his convictions as he did under fire.

'Dutch' Clark Likely To Take Colorado Job

Boulder, Colo., Feb. 25 (AP).—Reports on Colorado University campus indicated today that Earl "Dutch" Clark has decided to accept an offer of $3,000 a year to be assistant football and head basket ball coach.

Clark went to his home in Pueblo over the week-end to confer with members of his family and to decide whether he will remain here as coach or resume his career as a professional football player.

Devens to Remain in Back Bay, So Yanks Need Another Hurler

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Any hopes the Yankees may have had of inducing Charlie Devens, former Harvard right-hand pitching star, to change his mind about quitting baseball and going into the banking business were dashed today when Business Manager Ed Barrow formally placed Devens on the voluntarily retired list.

Devens wrote from Boston that he positively would not consider reporting to the Yanks.

Devens, now with the State Street Trust Co. in the Hub City, refused to be swayed even in the face of a substantial increase in salary.

Failure of the Back Bay right-hander to report leaves the Yanks badly in need of another starting pitcher, and gossip has it that they may go after Pat Malone, the big right-hander having contract troubles with the World's Champion St. Louis Cardinals.

Manager Joe McCarthy, for whom Malone worked on the Chicago Cubs, likes the big fellow and is reported anxious to make a deal with the Cards if they are willing to let him go and he can be waived out of the National League.

George Silkirk will be groomed for Babe Ruth's old post in right field in the event the Bambino doesn't sign or fails to make the grade as a regular.

Dust and Snow Combine to Lift Price of Grain

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Rallying power developed in the wheat market today and early setbacks of prices were more than overcome. A decrease of 3,147,000 bushels shown by the United States wheat visible supply total did much toward renewal of market strength, as did further dust storms Southwest. Snowfalls throughout most of the domestic wheat aera had only a transient bearish influence, the snow being reported as having drifted badly in places, allowing dust storms to persist.

Wheat closed firm at the same as Saturday's finish to ¼ cent higher, May 97 to 97⅛; corn unchanged to ¼ off; May oats, 84¼ to 84⅜; oats, ⅛ to ¼ up, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 5 cents gain.

By the latest decrease, aggregate domestic stocks of wheat in sight were brought down to 61,386,000 bushels, against 103,215,000 bushels a year ago. May wheat rallied to 97⅛ from 96¼, and May corn to 84⅛ from 83¾ before realizing of profits eased the markets back to somewhat under the day's top level. A sustaining factor as to wheat was expressed by trade authorities that even if moisture Southwest between now and harvest were twice normal it would by no means be a cure-all for existing adverse crop conditions.

Expert Foresees Calamity.

One of the country's foremost unofficial crop experts said that under such moisture and soil conditions as at present prevail regarding the western half of Kansas, Nebraska, the panhandle of Oklahoma, the panhandle of Texas and eastern Colorado, a calamity is in the making. Stress also was given to assertions that premiums of domestic spring wheat were not suggestive of any movement of ordinary Canadian milling wheat to this side of the border. It was urged that even very small United States purchases from Canada would break premiums and make imports unprofitable.

Corn and oats mainly followed the action of wheat. An increasing number of cars of corn were received in Chicago on consignment Provisions averaged higher, responsive to hog market up turns to a new top price record for the season.

Cotton Market

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 25.—Except for further near-month liquidation in preparation for March notices tomorrow, trading in cotton was featureless today. Prices moved narrowly, closing steady at a net decline of 1 point on March, but generally unchanged to 6 points higher.

Sellers of near months appeared to be rebuying in later deliveries and there were indications of a good demand for March from the trade at slightly wider differences.

At the close, March was selling 22 points under July, compared with 15 points at the close of last week, and 21 points under December, compared with 18 points at the close of Saturday.

Exports today, 21,901, making 3,311,126 so far this season. Port receipts, 7,820. United States port stocks, 2,618,509.

General Lowering of Interest Rates Is Expected to Be One of Chief Objectives of New Deal in Next Phase of Drive for Recovery.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 25.—A vigorous campaign to effect a general lowering of interest rates is expected to become one of the most basic aspects of the New Deal in its next phase. At the moment, this effort is most clearly manifest in the Government bond market. Bankers here say they have reason to believe, however, that before long a concerted move to bring down the general level of interest rates to other borrowers, especially long-term obligors on bonds and mortgages, will be launched from the National Capital.

Of all the manifold monetary and economic policies initiated from Washington since March, 1933, only the heavy spending of relief funds by the Federal Government has been consistently adhered to. While a reduction in interest rates has been eagerly sought, and has been effected in many instances, only sporadic attempts have been made to extend the lowering of rates to all types of debts. Before long, however, it is anticipated here that the drive to reduce the cost of borrowed funds will gather momentum and broaden in scope.

The plan of the campaign to bring down interest rates, as understood by bankers here, is to be roughly as follows:

The member banks, who now possess excess reserve on deposit with their Federal Reserve banks of more than $2,300,000,000, a new high record, will be loaded with additional surplus balances. This will be effected by the deposit with them, by the Treasury, of additional gold certificates. The inflow of gold has made it possible latterly for the Treasury to increase its gold certificate deposits with the Reserve banks without reducing the total of its own outright holdings of gold. If the gold inflow should cease, the Treasury can continue to pour gold into the Reserve banks, either by depositing with the latter some of its own free gold fund of about $900,000,000, or by having the exchange stabilization fund do so.

Federal Reserve Keeps Step With Treasury.

The member banks of the Federal Reserve System increase their excess reserve pari passu with the Treasury's deposit of gold certificates with the Reserve banks. This occurs through the quick spending by the Treasury of the deposit credit which it obtains at the Reserve banks by the deposit of the gold. As the Treasury spends these deposits, it transfers to the member banks the balances which it built up in the first instance by deposit of gold certificates with the Reserve banks. A similar result could be obtained by further purchase of Government bonds by the Reserve banks, which some bankers expect to witness soon.

The new bulge in excess reserves, and the simultaneous increase in deposits of commercial banks, is designed to break down the prevailing desire of many institutions for liquidity, and to get them to acquire additional long-term bonds. The provisions of the banking bill of 1935 for removal of statutory restrictions on rediscount privileges of member banks at the Federal Reserve banks are similarly designed to break down the inhibitions of the banks towards tying up their funds for long periods of time. Adherents of orthodox banking principles point out the irony of the present situation, in that, when the banks at last are returning to sound standards of liquidity in their lending policy after having departed from them so largely during the post-war decade, the Government is exerting all its influence to induce them again to tie up their funds in slow assets.

Bank buying of long-term bonds, including both Government and gilt-edge corporate obligations, has made itself felt increasingly in recent weeks. It is evident that the pressure of excess reserves is effecting the desired result as regards interest rates on long-term bonds. When the 2¾ per cent bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation crossed par last week, the credit of the Federal Government was definitely established on a 2¾ per cent basis, since direct Government bonds sell at a small premium above similar HOLC obligations.

The March 15 Treasury financing announcement reveals another step in the campaign. By restricting its offerings to the refunding of maturing notes and called Fourth 4¼'s, the Government is keeping down the available supply of long-term bonds, while stimulating the demand by the measures outlined above.

Demand for Short-Term Bills Continues Keen.

Over the next year, however, about $1,300,000,000 of new money can be obtained by the announced increase in the weekly Treasury bill offering from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. The demand for these short-dated bills is so keen that an increase in their outstanding amount does not affect the quotations of long-term Government bonds. Eventually, when the yield on Treasury bonds has been forced down to 2½ per cent or less, a major funding operation is likely. Thus, the sharp increase in the Federal debt will be offset by lower interest cost forced by an extreme easy money policy.

The establishment of new yields on Treasury obligations would next be used as the entering wedge for the drive to bring down interest rates on other types of bonds and on mortgages proportionately. The chief danger in the whole campaign is that further powerful encouragement is thus given to a new excessive inflation of credit. Political considerations will make timely application of restrictive measures extremely difficult, once the expansion of credit becomes fast enough to threaten another subsequent disastrous deflation as a sequel.

Federal Issues In Rise; Others Show Declines

Secondaries Lose From 1 to 2 Points in Day's Trading.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 25.—Support was lacking for secondary issues on the bond market today and many declines of 1 to 2 points were registered in this division. Corporate bonds of the better grade were fairly steady, but United States Government obligations turned soft in the final hour after several Treasury issues had established new highs for a year or longer in early dealings. Declines ranging from 2-32 to around ¼ of a point predominated at the close.

Among the most prominent losers in the secondary corporate section were New York Central Refunding 4½s, off 3 points at 50½, Nickel Plate 4½s, off 1¾ at 57½, and Southern Railway 4s, off 2⅝ at 43¾.

Others yielding nearly that much included obligations of the Erie, New Haven, Illinois Central, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Studebaker, Warner Brothers, and Great Northern. The Associated Press average for 20 rails declined 1.2 points to 83.6, a new low for the year.

A more even trend prevailed in prime investment loans despite the small turnover in this group. American Telephone 5s advanced ⅝ of a point to 109¾, Consumers Gas 5s were ⅝ higher at 104⅞, and Western Electric 5s gained ¼ at 106¼. Minor losses were shown by obligations of the Chesapeake & Ohio, Burlington, Union Pacific, Inland Steel and Pennsylvania.

Transfers aggregated $12,239,000, par value, compared with $13,446,000 on Friday.

Utilities Will Pay New York Millions

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—New York City will receive its first substantial payments this week under the 3 per cent tax on gross incomes of public utility companies.

Checks totaling at least $1,250,000 are due Thursday. An additional $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 is expected before the week-end from the retail sales tax.

Con. Gas Report Raises Protest At Meeting

Stockholders Organize Committee to Protect Utilities.

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 25.—Major corporations today brought into bold relief the difficulties confronting business which in turn are resulting in vague and uninteresting security markets. Included among the items were:

Annual report of the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York showing net income for last year of $35,709,578 compared with $48,896,442 in the previous year. Stockholders shouted bitterly at the forepart of the meeting and then before adjournment organized a committee to protect the company interests in the current uncertainty about utility companies.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works announced it would not pay interest on the consolidated mortgage bonds due March 1 and will reorganize under section 77b of the national bankruptcy act.

The Western Pacific Railroad announced it would be unable to pay the semiannual interest on the first mortgage 5 per cent bonds due March 1. The company will take advantage of a 90-day grace period, hoping to formulate a recapitalization plan during that time.

Stockholders of Electric Bond and Share Co. were advised by an executive of the company of the pending Rayburn public utility bill and urged to make every effort in protecting investments.

There was nothing about any of the developments warranting quick market action. Only 740,000 shares were exchanged with the ticker almost idle near the close. Railroad stocks again were weak—accompanying a sharp break in railroad bonds on the New York Stock Exchange—while utility issues gained strength. The industrial list showed a little easiness.

Steel Has 400,000 Employes In 433 Plants in United States

In more than 250 communities, scattered from Maine to California and from Minnesota to Texas, some phase of the steel industry is an important economic factor. According to a statement by the American Iron and Steel Institute, steel products covered by the steel code are manufactured in 433 different plants strategically located with respect to raw materials or markets.

The aggregate population of these cities and towns which have some part of the steel industry totaled 22,000,000 at the 1930 census. Employes of the steel industry and their families, therefore, constitute about 10 per cent of the total population of the steel-making districts, according to the institute.

With an aggregate investment of nearly $5,000,000,000 and with more than 400,000 employes, steel ranks in many of those communities as the principal industry. Pay rolls amounting to more than $455,000,000 were distributed in steel towns during 1934, while the industry annually pays an estimated $80,000,000 in taxes to Federal, State and local governments.

The greatest concentration of the industry, as might be expected, is in the leading industrial States. Pennsylvania leads with 130 plants making code steel products, while Ohio, with 87 plants, ranks second place. Illinois, New York and Indiana follow in succession. Alabama, Michigan, New Jersey and West Virginia each have 15 plants making steel products.

Insurance Here Confronted by New Rgulations

Bill Proposes to Put All Companies Under Commissioner.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Regulation of fire casualty and marine insurance companies operating in the District of Columbia looms in the near future under the terms of a bill now being prepared jointly by Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal and Insurance Commissioner John Marshall.

SEAL.

Similar to the life insurance act that went into effect last February, the bill, slated for introduction in the House of Representatives the eearly part of March, will place all companies in the fire, casualty and marine fields here under the direct supervision of the insurance commissioner.

The new code is acknowledged a long-felt need by numerous local insurance men who have been unsuccessfully striving to drive out fly-by-night operators. It will bring 227 fire insurance companies and 96 casualty companies under the regulatory wing of the insurance commission, where heretofore only the 97 life insurance companies operating here have been regulated.

Insurance Commission Report.

Since the life insurance code went into effect last year, rigorous standards of financial and moral responsibility have been enforced under the supervision of Commissioner Marshall.

MARSHALL.

Examinations on the insurance law of the District have been given to all applicants for agent's license. Insurance brokers who were not the accredited agents of any special company have been required to furnish character reference as well as undergoing the comprehensive examinations.

Income of the insurance commission from taxes and license fees collected in the District during the past year is estimated at approximately $450,000, while the total expenses of the commission are set at only about $20,000. Under the new code it is expected that revised license fees, as well as an increase hoped-for in insurance sales, will materially boost the 1934 figure.

Stock Trading.

The only other sale was in Capital Transit stock, two lots selling at 23½.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ per share on Peoples Drug Stores 6½ per cent preferred stock was announced on the exchange. It will be paid on March 15 to stock of record March 1. The 25 cents quarterly on the common will be paid April 1 to stock of record March 6. The common stock paid 25 cents quarterly in 1934, a 50-cent special on February 1 of that year, 100 per cent stock dividend on December 31 and $1.50 extra on January 2 of this year.

Eastman, Dillon Expands.

The most important changes in the personnel of prominent firms holding membership on the New York Stock Exchange to be announced in several years will take place on March 1, with the admission of several prominent investment bankers to the partnership of Eastman, Dillon & Co., which has been engaged in the investment banking and brokerage business for more than a quarter century.

The changes, according to the announcement, will result in the retirement from the active business of the firm of Herbert Lowell Dillon, one of the original founders, and the taking over of the senior interest in the firm by Lloyd S. Gilmour, formerly of Blyth & Co., Inc.; James P. Magill, of Philadelphia, at present connected with the firm, and Frank F. Walker, also formerly with the Blyth organization. The changes will also mark the return to active business in Wall Street of Henry L. Bogert, jr., a former partner of Eastman, Dillon & Co., who retired from business several years ago. Mr. Dillon and Arthur C. Boyce will be limited partners of the new firm.

In addition to the above, and in the order named, the following also will be partners of the new firm of Eastman, Dillon & Co.: Philip Brown, Arthur C. Boyce, Gilmer Siler, Thomas C. Eastman, member of the New York Stock Exchange; Loring Dam, of Philadelphia, and M. Lawrence Jones, member of the New York Cunb Exchange.

Curb Is Thin; Price Changes Lack Feature

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 25.—Trading was quiet and generally featureless on the curb exchange today. Except for a few specialties, price changes were narrowly mixed.

In thin dealings, losses of 1 to 2 points were recorded by Aluminum Co. of America, Dow Chemical, Newmont and Singer Manufacturing. Among the more active issues small fractional gains were shown by American Gas & Electric, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker, International Petroleum, Lake Shore and Swift Internacional. Minor declines prevailed in American Cyanamid "B," Pioneer Gold and Creole Petroleum. General Tire & Rubber got down some 4 points.

Transfers approximated only 119,000 shares compared with 151,000 last Thursday, the previous full trading session.

WHERE PERPETUAL CARE IS MORE THAN A PROMISE

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

RADIO looks to the women—to offer them beauty aids, free samples, romantic tenors, and household hints. Now the women look to radio—and tell it where and how it's wrong.

Some months ago the Women's National Radio committee, composed of the majority of women's organizations, got together to improve standards of radio. Now the advisory chairman, Mme. Yolanda Mero-Irion, announces that they will offer four prizes this year, two for the best sustaining program on the air, and two for the best sponsored program.

Judges are: Fannie Hurst, Eva Le Galliene, Mrs. Elmer James Ottaway, former president of the National Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Oliver Harriman, of the Women's Exposition of Arts and Industries; Walter W. Naumberg, head of the foundation that bears his name, and A. Walter Kramer, composer—writer—critic.

These judges will be asked to listen in on a group of 10 programs in each classification, programs selected by the combined efforts of all the clubwomen in the country.

Says Mme. Mero-Irion: "Since it is the desire of the Women's National Radio committee, through this award, to encourage broadcasters and advertisers in their attempts to present better programs, the judges will be asked to keep this in mind in making their decision. Likewise the placement and character of advertising on the sponsored programs will be given due consideration. If in the opinion of the judges it is either too long, too persistent or lacks the fundamentals of good taste, even though the program on which it appears is an excellent one, it will not be given the preference."

Did someone say that all women are reformers at heart?

The Washington Composers Club has a program all to itself tonight when the Navy Symphony Orchestra will play an entire program of their compositions. On WOL at 8:30 p. m.

You'll hear "Lotus Eaters" and "The Hairy Ape," by Edward C. Potter; "Impressions of the Bowery," by La Salle Spier; "Cathedral Cliffs," by R. Deane Shure; "Concerto for Piano," by Louis Malone;" "Dirge," by Mary Howe, and "Impressions of the New Market Caverns," by J. Alden Finckel. Lieut. Charles Benter, the leader, will play one of his compositions, "Habanera."

"Captain Dobbsie's Ship of Joy," a popular Pacific Coast feature, launches a new cruise tonight on WJSV, 10:30. The Skipper, cheerful soul that he is, will be supported by Horace Heidt and his Californians, five solo vocalists, three combination soloists, a girl's sextet, two instrumental soloists, a glee club and 27 musicians playing a total of 210 instruments. To say nothing of seven arrangers.

MUSICAL high-spots:
"Iolanthe," the Gilbert and Sullivan opus, on WMAL, 2:15 p. m.

Lawrence Tibbett sings excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet," and "Tales of Hoffman," WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

Barbara Maurel and Eugene Dubois share honors on "Understanding Music," program, WJSV, 6:30 p. m. Miss Maurel sings "Bois Epais," and "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice;" Mr. Dubois plays "Meditation" from "Thais."

DRAMATIC features:
Rostand's masterpiece, "Cyrano de Bergerac," goes on the air today, WJSV, 2:30 p. m. with Richard Whorf in the title role, Adrianne Marden as Roxanne, and Chester Stratton as Christian. (Personal note: If this program wasn't scheduled during office hours, it's one we wouldn't fail to hear.)

Beauty Box Theater presents "Good News," musical comedy of predepression days, with Peg La Centra and John Barclay in leading roles. At 10 p. m., WRC.

In the realm of the ridiculous, Walter Shakespeare O'Keefe and Louis Strindberg Sorin give you a double bill tonight, WJSV, 10 p. m. The first presentation, sponsored by the Egyptian Mummy Corporation (why, we don't know) is the life story of Anthony and Cleopatra; the second is a Scottish bit called "The Bagpiper's Revenge." The ghost of Sandy McPangus is heard through the courtesy of Scotch Ghosts, Limited. Mr. O'Keefe is the bagpipe.

SPEECHES:
Representative Dickstein, WJSV, 11:15 p. m. "Un-American Activity."

Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, WJSV, 4 p. m. "Builders of Intagibles Within the Walls."

Secretary Wallace on the Farm and Hour, WMAL, 12:30 p. m. "What Kind of a Foreign Trade Policy Do the Farmers Want?"

Other best bets: Adolph Menjou is guest on Ben Bernie's show, WRC, 9 p. m. . . . Grace Hayes is with Isham Jones, WJSV, 9:30 p. m. . . . Jane Addams is given an award for leadership of social advancement, WMAL, 11:15 p. m. . . . Bing Crosby and Mills Brothers on WJSV, 9 p. m.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Authority.

OLD JINX has kept on failing at everything he tried; and plain and easy sailing the gods would not provide. One time he was a grocer and every day he saw the sheriff drawing closer with mandates of the law. He tried to be a pastor and drove the folks away; the usual disaster o'erwhelmed him in a day. He started in at plumbing and when he looked outside, beheld the sheriff coming in all his pomp and pride. He started selling clothing and hoped he'd conquer fate, but saw, with bitter loathing, the sheriff at the gate. He tried his hand at farming as one more masterstroke, but found the job alarming and pretty soon went broke. Embarked as an attorney he learned to rant and roar, but shortly made a journey toward the poorhouse door. Hard luck was always striding wherever he might flee, the sheriff always hiding behind his banyan tree. The fates were always grouching and hinting of the dump, the sheriff always crouching behind the cistern pump. And now old Jinx is busted, as flat as man can be and he would not be trusted for kopeck or bawbee. And he is still explaining how statesmen should behave, to start our commerce gaining and save things from the grave. His counsel is not heeded by legislative bums, although he knows what's needed whene'er a crisis comes. He sees so many blunders, so many errors foul, that in distress he wonders why no one heeds his howl.

New Building Dedicated Here To U. S. Labor

Message From President Read; Miss Perkins and Green Speakers.

With a message from the President serving as the keynote and the occasion given over to aims and ideals of working men and women of the Nation, the magnificent new Department of Labor Building yesterday was dedicated to the lives and welfare of labor.

To an audience composed of labor leaders, Department of Labor employes, members of the Diplomatic Corps and friends of labor, Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady read President Roosevelt's message, which said:

"I take this occasion to extend my felicitations to the wage earners of the entire country upon the formal opening of the fine new home which now houses the Federal department directly concerned with their problems."

Green, Perkins Speak.

In a brief address before she introduced the chief speaker—William Green, president o fthe American Federation of Labor—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said the new structure "symbolizes the change coming over the lot of working people in the United States."

"We hold," Green said, "that the right of employes to organize in unions and to have representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of bargaining collectively, is essential to self-government in industry and that self-government in industry is far preferable to industrial or political dictatorship or political regulation.

"We look to the Department of Labor for help in keeping the balance between human welfare and technical progress. Since we do look to the activities housed within this building for service in our work of promoting the welfare of workers, we anticipate a basis of friendly understanding and cooperation."

Concert Opens Program.

The ceremonies, held in the auditorium of the new building, were opened with a concert by the United Miners Workers' Band, of West Virginia, an organization which, Miss Perkins, pointed out, has played on the picket lines during strikes. The invocation was delivered by the Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, chaplain of the Senate, while the benediction was pronounced by Mgr. John A. Ryan, of the Catholic University.

Following the formal exercises, a musical program was opened with two songs sung by James C. Quinn, secretary-treasurer of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City. Then came a program of folk songs played instrumentally by a group of Southern textile workers. Next were spirituals by the Department of Labor Crescendo male chorus. The program closed with singing by the entire audience.

After the program Miss Perkins and other officials of the department received. The building was open for inspection all afternoon with tours organized to show visitors through. Miss Perkins had borrowed several paintings and sculpture of interest to labor. These were on exhibit.

'Legs' Murder Baffles London

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 25.—Chief inspector Donaldson of Scotland Yard, who had charge of the famous Brighton mysteries, "trunk crime No. 1," and its sequel, "No. 2," tonight took over London's latest dismemberment mystery sensation—the gruesome find of a pair of human legs on a suburban train.

The legs, severed from the body of a man, were discovered by trainmen stuffed under the seat of a coach arriving at Waterloo Station from suburban Houslow. A coach cleaner inspecting a third-class compartment found the objects wrapped in a newspaper and with an outside covering of heavier brown paper.

It was recalled that the woman's torso in Brighton's "trunk crime No. 1" was similarly wrapped. The Brighton crime, occurring last summer, was officially closed last week by a coroner's jury returning an "open verdict." The woman's identity was never discovered. The head and arms of the woman never have been found.

Physicians examining the legs estimated their owner had been dead about 12 hours.

The committee also recommended reappointment of Frederic A. Delano as a member of the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

A bill setting aside $175,000 to buy books for the blind was approved and a congressional medal ... Torrey F. Holtzapple, of York, Pa., for being the first to administer oxygen in the treatment of pneumonia.

Hamilton Sets Hostages Free In Texas Dash

Outlaw Reported Slightly Wounded by One of 3 Youths Released.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 25.—Elusive Raymond Hamilton released three farm-boy hostages near Fort Worth, Tex., today and resumed a wild flight from the law reminiscent of the tactics used by his late partner in crime, Clyde Barrow.

The youths, J. C. Loftice, Buster Mayes and J. C. Harlow, returned to their homes near Celina, Tex., in Mayes' car, without reporting to police.

Hamilton and an unidentified companion, believed to be a former convict, evaded a police trap near McKinney, Tex., last night, fleeing before a barrage of gunfire. The farm boys were kidnaped soon afterward and the outlaws took the trio on a dash toward Fort Worth in Mayes' car.

Hamilton Reported Wounded.

Mayes said Hamilton was slightly wounded in the face, but that his companion escaped the volley officers poured into their car "with only a few bullet holes in his hat."

"Hamilton was cordial and treated us nicely, but he was plenty sore about what happened at McKinney," Mayes said. "Hamilton and his friend gave us lunches in Denton and Fort Worth."

The boys said Hamilton stole a car in Fort Worth, forced his prisoners to accompany them a few miles west and then told them "to go home."

Officers who poured shots into the fugitives' car as it sped along a little-used road two miles north of McKinney last night, did not learn until morning that Hamilton, condemned killer, bank robber and escaped convict, and his companion had abducted Loftice near Weston, Tex.

The three drove in Loftice's car to the farm of Bill Mayes, west of Celina, where they stayed until daybreak.

Then they loaded the three youths into the Mayes car and disappeared.

Officers Used Army Rifles.

It was revealed the eight McKinney officers who tried to waylay Hamilton and his confederate were armed with four of the Army automatic rifles Hamilton stole from the National Guard armory at Beaumont about ten days ago.

Constable Johnny Record said officers a few days ago raided a Hamilton hide-out near McKinney and seized the weapons.

In all, eight automatic rifles were stolen from the Beaumont Armory and Hamilton and his companion used two of them to return the fire of officers as they drove toward Weston, 10 miles northwest of McKinney. A short distance from Weston, the fugitives abandoned the bullet-torn car. Just before midnight they held up and kidnaped young Loftice.

In his roadster, they traveled to the Mayes farm. They left the roadster there. Although they kept the boys and Mayes under guard until morning, they did not harm them. Mayes was not tied when they left him.

Escaped Previous Trap.

It is the second time in the last few weeks that Hamilton, under death sentence for the killing of a guard in an escape from Eastham State Prison Farm, has escaped death in a police barrage. At a Dallas apartment house, police recently fired nearly 100 shots at him.

When he and Clyde Barrow were preying on small town banks over the Southwest, they frequently resorted to kidnaping when hotly pursued. They often held residents of isolated sections captive while they were hiding.

Hamilton succeeded to the dubious distinction of the Southewest's No. 1 outlaw when Barrow and his gun girl, Bonnie Parker, were slain by officers on a Louisiana highway.

Arkansas Legislature Ends Prohibition Law

Love Justified Aiding Barrow, Mother States

Bonnie Parker's Parent Offers Same Defense to Federal Jury.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 25.—The love of their mothers for Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker was held before a Federal jury today as justification for harboring the slain bandit couple when every law enforcement agency of the Southwest was seeking them.

Attorneys for the two women, Mrs. Cumis Barrow, mother of Clyde, and Mrs. Emma Parker, mother of Bonnie, pleaded with the jury that mother love would not allow them to betray their children.

"He was my boy; I loved him," Mrs. Barrow testified in her own defense Saturday. Mrs. Parker did not take the stand.

18 Others Accused.

For the 18 other persons accused of harboring the fugitives, killed in Louisiana last may by a group of officers headed by a former Texas Ranger, their attorneys pleaded lack of knowledge of formal charges pending against them as the case ended and legal arguments began. The Government alleges the defendants aided and harbored Barrow and Bonnie with full knowledge that they were wanted on Federal charges.

The fifth defendant to change his plea, John Basden, today entered a plea of guilty to the charge. Others who have changed their pleas at various stages of the trial are Mary O'Dare, former companion of Raymond Hamilton, fugitive; James Mullen, Joe Francis and Mrs. Blanche Barrow, widow of the slain Buck Barrow, a brother of Clyde.

Judge William H. Atwell, at the opening of today's session, overruled motions for instructed verdicts acquitting Mrs. Emma Parker, Mrs. Mildred Hamilton, wife of Floyd Hamilton, Raymond's brother; Mrs. Steve Devis, mother of Raymond Hamilton; Marie Francis, sister of Clyde Barrow, and Audrey Fay Barrow.

Bonnie's Sister Testifies.

Billie Mace, sister of Bonnie Parker, the only witness presented today before the defense rested, told how the families and associates of the elusive couple were notified of planned meetings in and near Dallas by a note tossed into Mrs. Barrow's yard in a bottle as Clyde and Bonnie sped past in an automobile.

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 25 (AP).—A kerosene blast today killed Nancy June Hyslop, 5, and her sister, Violet, 3, and critically injured their two half-brothers, Samuel and Emanuel Reed, 19 and 15, respectively. The explosion occurred when the boys poured kerosene into a stove.

Kelly Conceded Victory Today In Chicago Vote

Electors Are Apathetic as Hour for Nominating Mayor Nears.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—The Socialists sent their regrets today, but the Democrats and Republicans, if the weather is nice tomorrow, will take the franchise out for a little mild exercise and nominate some nominees for mayor, city clerk, city treasurer and aldermen.

What will go down in history as the acme of apathetic elections occurs between the hours of 6 a. m. and 5 p. m., and no one is keeping it a secret that Mayor Edward J. Kelly will be nominated for the same job.

Democratic organization support assured him the place, but complimentary, if ineffectual, ballots are conceded to the three other Democratic aspirants, Martin Powroznik, James Fred Robertson and John P. O'Meara. They are supported by minor groups.

The Republican Party organization failed to get together on a favorite son or daughter and left three volunteers to fight it out in their own way. Mrs. Grace Gray petitioned herself onto the ballot as the first woman mayoral candidate. Emil C. Wetten, attorney, and Mortimer B. Flynn, coal man, offered themselves to head the party ticket.

But the Socialist Party bowed itself clear out of the picture today, uttering a bitter complaint about the election law "designed to make practically impossible the rise of new parties."

They explained the Socialists could not collect the 60,000 signatures necessary to nominate a city ticket, and charged that the law requiring this was a fraud devised purposely to frustrate any real political democracy.

Nobody having made a campaign, it turned out to be the cheapest primary contest on record. Party chests were kept locked, and Mayor Kelly issued a statement today denouncing as "racketeers" anyone who solicited campaign funds for him. He'll need none, he said, and none of his foes seemed optimistic of the chances of upsetting the Democratic machinery in the April election.

More Italian Troops Sail for East Africa

Messina, Sicily, Feb. 25 (U.P.).—The troopship Conte Biancamano sailed at 5:35 p. m. today for East Africa, carrying another contingent of 100 officers and 2,600 men to the Italian colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland, bordering on Abyssinia.

Throngs on the wharf cheered the King and Premier Benito Mussolini, waving flags and singing patriotic songs until the liner cleared port.

Educators Told to 'Speak Out' on Grievances to Get Results.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 25.—Through national economic planning the people of the United States may enjoy a "fuller liberty" than they enjoy today, Dr. Charles E. Merriam, of the National Resources Board, told the sixty-fifth annual convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association here today.

Charles A. Beard, author and historian, speaking also on a subject in keeping with the convention's central theme, "social change and education," declared that former President Hoover had made "a breach in the historic thought of America," and that President Roosevelt had widened it.

The educators, assembled from all parts of the country, received from Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, a message of greeting from President Roosevelt in which the President stated it was the duty of the teachers "to see that education provides strength and security for those institutions we have treasured * * *."

All Urged to Speak Out.

The objectives of national planning are clearly stated in the preamble to the Constitution, Dr. Merriam said.

"However, there are those who believe that their liberties are in jeopardy," he said. "I rejoice that they speak out, that they organize and agitate in support of their judgments, for only in this way may our liberties be maintained."

The Democratic system, he said, is "based upon the principle that the gains of civilization are mass gains and should be diffused throughout the people as properly and equitably as possible."

A movement was launched today by the department of supervisors and teachers of home economics of the NEA to bring before the general convention a resolution urging exemption of hospitals and clinics from Federal laws which forbid the use of the mails for disseminating birth-control information. The 300 members of the group passed the resolution.

Movie Practice Attacked.

A committee of the NEA's department of secondary education, headed by William Lewin, of Newark, also started a drive to end the double-feature motion picture booking in which children's and adults' films appear on the same program.

Prof. George Drayton Strayer, of Teachers College, Columbia University, speaking at a meeting of the American Education Association, held concurrently, said the depression "has established beyond a reasonable doubt the absolute necessity for further Federal support of schools."

Dr. Beard declared the "whole Nation is engaged in a quest for greater convenience and security."

Jones Sees Times Better.

"While the economic scene has been changing, thought has been changing," he said.

"When President Hoover declared that 'no one shall starve in America' and took steps to check the course of the panic, he made a breach in the historic thought of America.

"When President Roosevelt in his message of January 4, 1935, proclaimed his objectives to be the security of livelihood, security against the major hazards of life and security of homes, he widened the breach opened by his predecessor."

Jones told the teachers that "general business conditions are better everwhere, and after describing the work of the RFC said "the time has come, if we are to have lasting recovery, when banks must be more considerate toward prospective borrowers and those who are able should borrow and invest and take a reasonable risk, all with faith in their country and their money."

'Vernon' Charged With Fake Picture

Son of President Brings False Portrait Claim.

Accused by a son of former President Cleveland at a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday, George J. Shepard, 57, of the 2500 block of Thirteenth street northwest, was held in $10,000 bond on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Shepard, under the name of "Vernon," allegedly sold a fake portrait of the former President to his son, Richard F. Cleveland, of Baltimore, Md. Cleveland said the picture was represented as the work of Paul Bersch, a painter who lived in Baltimore nearly 40 years ago. The portrait was later taken to experts and found to be a fraud.

Early last month, Cleveland testified, he received a letter signed by "George J. Shepard," offering for sale a portrait of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Md. The picture was represented as the work of Rembrandt Peale. The signature was similar to the handwriting in the "Vernon" letter and Cleveland notified police.

Shepard was arrested here last week and has been in jail awaiting the hearing before Commissioner Turnage. He will face action of the grand jury.

Barry Calls Self Bank Fraud Dupe

Dempsey-Tunney Referee Denies Check Juggling.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Dave Barry, referee of the "long count" Dempsey-Tunney fight, sparred on the witness stand with prosecutors today in his trial for the embezzlement of $55,000 from the Amalgamated Trust & Savings Bank.

Barry pictured himself as a dupe for Joseph Baiata, the former convict, who, prosecutors charged, fashioned a plot to loot the bank and, with the proceeds, obtain control of the Abraham Lincoln Life Insurance Co., of Springfield, Ill., and an Indianapolis, Ind., bank.

The Dapper Barry's defense was that he knew nothing of check juggling in the bank confessed by Otto van Derck, young bank clerk at the Amalgamated, who said he withheld checks at behest of the alleged plotters.
